Johnson's Record Victory Crushes Goldwater Forces

Major Gains In Congress By Democrats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lyndon Baines Johnson scored greatest presidential victory in U.S. today and proclaimed his determination to "make this nation whole again" after one of the bitterest campaigns of modern times.

His avalanche of votes buried the hopes of Republican Sen. Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona that Americans were ripe this year for a return to conservatism.

In Phoenix, Ariz., Goldwater telegraphed congratulations to the president and offered his help "toward achieving a growing and better America and a secure and dignified peace."

But Goldwater also made it clear that he and his followers were not abondoning the political arena. He said they would keep fighting to make the Republican party the vehicle for a conservative victory later on.

Johnson carried with him into power an overwhelmingly Democratic congress.

In a victory statement issued some nine hours before Goldwater formally conceded defeat, Johnson interpreted the election results as "a mandate for unity" and a command "to move forward toward peace and a better life for all of our people."

The Democratic sweep carried new faces into congress, but it was not uniformly overpowering.

It apparently saved the Ohio senate seat of Stephen M. Young, who held a narrow lead in a see-saw battle with his GOP challenger, 46-year-old Robert Taft Jr.

But it was unavailing for Sen. Pierre Salinger in California who was defeated for a full term by actor George Murphy, Republican.

In New York, Robert Kennedy managed to defeat veteran Republican senator Kenneth Keating, but was far below Johnson's record total in the state.

Johnson said he looked on his election as an opportunity to heal the campaign wounds of the U.S.

Earns White House In Own Right

For the 56-year-old former school teacher from Texas it was a triumph consonant with his dreams. A year ago he had inherited the office of President from a martyred President. But now he had earned the White House in his own right.

He won this testament from the people in an election which shattered established voting patterns.

Goldwater, candidate of the party of Abraham Lincoln, won five states in the traditionally Democratic south and his native Arizona.

But Johnson won all the rest — 44 states and the District of Columbia.

The five southern states won by Goldwater were Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, and South Carolina.

The tide of votes which swept Johnson to victory also gave his party its greatest majority in the House of Representatives since the peak election performance in 1936 of his mentor and idol, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Johnson's landslide enveloped Vermont, which had never voted Democratic before; the industrial east, the farm belt, the mountain states, the west coast, Alaska, and Hawaii.

It encompassed suburbs which normally vote Republican and rural regions which in the past have been distrustful of Democrats.

With 270 electoral votes needed to win, Johnson received the clinching returns from his home state when Texas gave him its 25 electoral college votes at 10:11 p.m. EST.

From then on his victory increased in magnitude until he had captured well over 61 per cent of the total popular vote, a margin greater than FDR's greatest.

With 95 per cent of the precincts reported, Johnson had won 45 states with 486 electoral votes; Goldwater had won six states with 52 electoral votes.

The Democrats had won 290 seats and were leading in six others for an indicated total of 296 in the new Congress—a gain of 39. The Republicans had captured 135 and were ahead four races for an indicated total of 139. The makeup of the 88th Congress was 257 Democrats and 178 Republicans.

Republicans Gain One Governor

In the Senate, the Democrats took 27 seats. Coupled with 40 holdovers this would give them an indicated 67—one more than in the last session. The Republicans had won seven seats and were ahead in one for an indicated strength of 33.

In the 25 governorship contests, the Democrats had won 17. With their 16 holdovers, they now total 33 governors—a net loss of one. The Republicans won eight gubernatorial races. With their nine holdovers, this gave them 17.

The election left the Republicans divided and shaken after

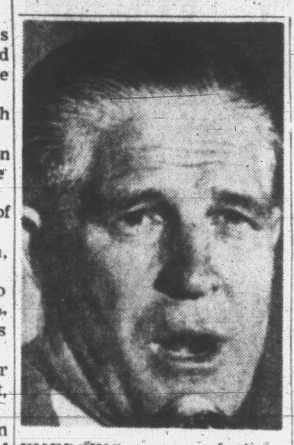
'No Bitterness'—Barry; Wires Congratulations



EMERGING as one of strong men in Republican party is Governor George Romney who survived Johnson landslide in Michigan to win another term. Romney is a Republican "Moderate" who was cool to the candidacy of Barry Goldwater.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater wired his congratulations to President Johnson today and offered his help "toward achieving a growing and better America and a secure and dignified peace."

"I say to the president as a fellow politician he did a wonderful job . . . he did a good job and I have congratulated him on it."

In a telegram which he read at his press headquarters here, Goldwater said, however, that the GOP "remains the party of opposition when opposition is called for.

"There is much to be done with Viet Nam, Cuba, the problem of law and order in this country, and a productive economy. Communism remains our number one obstacle to peace and I know that all Americans will join with you in honest solutions to these problems," Goldwater said.

Reading the telegram at his press headquarters Goldwater told newsmen he has "no bitterness or rancor" as a result of the election.

'DISAPPOINTED'

"I am surprised at the figures of this election, they did not reach the numbers that turned out in the 1960 election. I am disappointed that not more voters turned out," said Goldwater.

Asked about the defeat of candidates for Congress and governorships around the U.S., Goldwater said he has not had a chance to look at these totals. He said, however, that he be-

'RIGHT CHOICE'

World Leaders Hail LBJ

By REUTERS

The world appeared in unusual agreement today that the American people had made the "right choice" in overwhelmingly returning Lyndon B. Johnson as president of the United States.

In general, many world leaders expressed relief that Republican candidate Barry Goldwater and his extreme right-wing followers didn't make it to the White House.

The only voice of dissent at the results came from Nationalist China where officials privately expressed disappointment at the Republican senator's defeat.

Many Nationalist Chinese favored Goldwater because they felt the Chiang Kai-shek regime might have had a freer hand to strike against Communist China

DAVIE VS. JOHN

Tories Fear Party Clash

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—A head-on clash between the leaders of the B.C. and federal Conservative parties appeared inevitable today as a result of drastically opposed views on patriation of the constitution.

The clash is certain to further increase Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker's inter-party problems and weaken his already deteriorating political position.

The vast differences in attitude between Diefenbaker and E. Davey Fulton, the leader of the B.C. Conservative party, were revealed today in a confidential memorandum from Fulton to federal Conservative leaders.

The former justice minister argued in his memorandum that the Liberal party's constitutional amendment formula does not alter in principle or effect the amending formula proposed by the Conservatives in 1961.

Diefenbaker, however, has been arguing strongly against the latest amendment formula on the grounds that it delegates too much power to the provinces.

Diefenbaker and some editorial writers argue that the formula delegates too much power to the provinces by permitting them to encroach too much on Ottawa's jurisdiction over matters hitherto exclusive to it.

But Fulton strongly disagrees with this argument in his confidential memo, which is being leaked to the press by Ottawa Conservatives.

After making five-page comparison of the 1961 Conservative formula and the latest Liberal formula, Fulton concludes that the two formulas do not differ in principle or effect.

Canuck Shot By Mistake On Cyprus

NICOSIA (CP) — Canadian troops in Cyprus suffered their first shooting casualty today when a Greek-Cypriot soldier mistook a Canadian Guardsman for a Turkish-Cypriot and fired a machine-gun at him, wounding him in the forearm.

Gdsmn. J. B. Muise, 34, of Picton, Ont., father of eight children, suffered a flesh wound in the early-morning incident in the Greek-Cypriot sector near the famed Green Line across this divided capital. He was reported in good condition in hospital this afternoon.

Armed Forces Junta Rules In Bolivia

LA PAZ (AP)—President Victor Paz Estenssoro was overthrown in a military revolt in Bolivia today and fled the country.

Gen. Alfredo Obando Candia, armed forces commander, announced he had taken over the government as head of a military junta.

He pledged to retain power as briefly as possible and to call new elections.

He said Paz Estenssoro had brought trouble upon himself by fostering a constitutional amendment which permitted him to be elected to a second consecutive term last May.

Paz Estenssoro resigned to avoid bloodshed, Obando said.

ELECTED, BUT HIDING

NEW YORK (AP) — Representative Adam Clayton Powell, subject to arrest in New York any day but Sunday, voted an absentee ballot in Tuesday's election.

Powell, a Democrat, was re-elected in Harlem for an 11th term.

Two warrants for his arrest have been issued for his refusal to pay $46,500 in a slander judgment.

'BIND UP OUR WOUNDS,' SAYS JOHNSON

Huge Barbecue for a Huge Victory

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Lyndon B. Johnson planned a joyous Texas-style reunion with his election running-mate today, and asked all Americans to "bind up our wounds and to make this nation whole."

Vice-President - Elect Hubert Humphrey and Mrs. Humphrey were to fly down from Minneapolis, where they spent Tuesday night, for a huge mid-day barbecue at the LBJ ranch on the banks of the Pedernales River.

Other than that relaxing feast, the presidential plans were still unannounced.

Riding the wavecrest of votes that swamped Republican opponent Barry Goldwater, Johnson made an early morning appearance at the Municipal Auditorium in nearby Austin.

The main note he sounded, in a voice hoarse and soft, was that "there are many more things in America that unite us than divide us."

He asked Americans to "face the world as one" and called the election result "a mandate for unity, for a government that serves no special interest—no business government, no labor government."

Elected overwhelmingly and in his own right, Johnson pledged his administration "will be a government that provides equal opportunity for all and special privileges for none. It is a command to build on those principles and to move forward toward peace and a better life for all our people."

MOSCOW (Reuters) — China announced tonight Premier Chou En-lai will head a seven-man delegation of the Chinese Communist party and government to the Moscow celebrations of the Soviet revolution anniversary Nov. 7.

Magic Name of Kennedy Sweeps Bobby to Senate

NEW YORK (UPI)—The familiar and apparently magic name of Kennedy was back in the forefront of Democratic party politics today as Robert F. Kennedy celebrated a smashing victory in his first bid for elective office.

Although he was unable even to vote for himself, Kennedy convinced an overwhelming number of New York State voters that he was the right man for them—and not just a "carpetbagger" or political opportunist.

With nearly all of the state's record number of votes counted, the 38-year-old Kennedy appeared headed for a 600,000 vote plurality over his Republican opponent, Sen. Kenneth B. Keating. This would give him a greater victory in the state than that registered in 1960 by his brother, the late president John F. Kennedy, who won by 384,000.

BOBBY KENNEDY
. . . no carpetbagger

Despite his victory, Kennedy ran far behind President Johnson's record-breaking pace in the empire state. Over a million voters in the state split their ballots to vote for Johnson and then crossed to the Republican column to vote for Sen. Keating.

The president rolled up an all-time-high plurality of nearly 2,400,000 votes in New York. He became the first presidential candidate in the state's modern history to capture every county, many of them rock-ribbed Republican strongholds.

But Kennedy still won in nearly every part of the state—in New York City, the suburbs and in upstate rural areas. He overcame a partial defection by voters in the Jewish sections of New York City, where Keating ran about 10 per cent better than he had six years ago.

ROUND-A-BOUT

By DOUGLAS HILLSIDE

Italian authorities go to great lengths to prevent the nation's art treasures from being exported.

Their stringent requirements put Victoria artist Margaret Peterson in an uncomfortable position when it came time to ship home from Ravenna a new mural for University of Victoria McPherson library. (We ran a picture of it on the front page of The Times on Tuesday).

Artist Peterson

The glass mosaic, commissioned for $1,700 ("a tremendous bargain" to pleased Uvic planners), complements the building's massive concrete exterior panels made by Vancouver sculptor George Norris.

All arrangements for its shipment, duty-free, were made well in advance of completion. But such are the "trials, tribulations and indignities suffered by an itinerant artist," Miss Peterson wrote home, that she had to declare the mural was not a great art treasure before Italian customs men would release it.

Victoria minister Rev. Albert E. King tells of the bride who was nervous about remembering what she had to do at the wedding ceremony. The minister told her:

"There are only three things to remember — the aisle you walk up, the altar at the end of it, and the bridegroom."

Later, as she walked into the church, the bride was heard muttering to herself in what sounded like an ominous tone:

"Aisle altar him!"

Goldstream Park naturalist Freeman King has had his summer season extended this year to include duty weekends during the salmon run.

"I've spoken to about 300 people in the last three weekends," Skipper said, "and, you know, it's surprising the number of people who go out to see the salmon and don't see them.

Naturalist King

"Also, I'm amazed by the ignorance of many people on the habits and general knowledge of salmon."

Skipper is park guide during the tourist season, but is always happy to take a nature lover over the many trails that wind through the woods and along the lakes and beaches of Greater Victoria.

Salmon running in Goldstream now are mostly coho, he said. They fight their way about two miles upstream as far as the second falls in the campsite.

"I'm looking into reports of salmon running in Colquitz River," Skipper added. "It's the first time I've heard of any in quite a few years."

Conventions have a habit of being late in starting their functions, but possibly a record was set this week at the Air Transport Association of Canada annual meeting at the Empress.

The opening luncheon Monday, addressed by Northern Affairs Minister Arthur Laing, started 30 minutes late. So did a panel discussion the next day with senior government officials.

Both of these were capped Tuesday night when the annual banquet didn't start until more than an hour after it was supposed to.

"No speaka da English" should prevent visitors from finding their way around Butchart Gardens.

For the past three years colored folders and guides have been printed in English, French and Spanish. Now Japanese, German and Italian have been added to the list of international languages, and it is possible that Chinese will be on the list for next summer.

Menus are still in English but by next summer travellers from around the world may also know in advance exactly what it is they ordered.

The translations are done in London, England, printed, then returned for corrections.

Leading Polls Predicted Sweep

NEW YORK (AP)—Pre-election political polls predicted correctly President Lyndon B. Johnson's smashing presidential victory over his Republican opponent, U.S. Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona.

The two national polls, the Gallup poll and the Harris poll, each had given Johnson 64 per cent of the popular vote and Goldwater 36 per cent.

Samuel Lubell, whose report does not include percentage figures, predicted a "Johnson landslide." With 95 per cent of the vote counted, Johnson had about 61 per cent.

In 1936, Franklin D. Roosevelt obtained 60.8 per cent of the popular vote. In 1920, Warren G. Harding captured 60.4 per cent.

They were the only two candidates since 1900 to win more than 60 per cent of the overall vote.

PROTECTION NEEDED, VICTORIA CLUB TOLD

Ontario, Quebec 'Kept' Provinces

Ontario and Quebec are the "kept provinces" of Canada, Dr. Frank MacKinnon of Charlottetown, president of the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Foundation, said here Tuesday.

He predicted that if Quebec separated from Canada it would be bankrupt in six months and if Ontario decided to go it alone it would last seven months.

"Industries of central Canada have always been dependent upon protective tariffs," he told the Canadian Club. "That was the basis of Sir John A. Macdonald's policy for building this nation and it remains true today.

"Without these protective tariffs, which mean the rest of Canada pays roughly one-third more for the goods it buys, industry in Ontario and Quebec would be in grave danger from powerful competitors south of the border."

Dr. MacKinnon said he wished someone would tell this to the Quebec's separatists.

He said the next frontier Canadians will have to conquer is a cultural one.

"All this talk of flags and anthems means little unless there is feeling behind them—being Canadian has to mean something. Canadians will never get a lump in their throats from looking at the Trans-Canada Highway."

PGE Strike Vote

VANCOUVER (CP)—Some 200 trainmen on the Pacific Great Eastern railway begin voting Monday in a government-supervised strike vote to back their demands in contract negotiations with the government-owned company. The poll is expected to take 10 days.

Sweeping Changes For ARDA Studied

TORONTO (CP) — Forestry Minister Sauve said Tuesday the federal government has asked the provinces to approve far-reaching amendments to the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act to make the legislation more effective from 1965 to 1970.

He told the Ontario Federation of Agriculture that the amendments are designed to correct deficiencies in the ARDA program, a joint federal-provincial effort to help rural areas suffering from low incomes and lack of opportunity for economic development.

Mr. Sauve said the current ARDA agreement will terminate at the end of April. He said a draft proposal for a new agreement for 1965-70 now is being considered by the provinces and will be discussed in detail at a federal-provincial conference in Montreal in late November.

The minister said he could not discuss the draft proposal in detail but could outline the general concepts on which the proposal is based.

These were that the ARDA program should emphasize land use adjustment, including the consolidation of low-income farms, that new steps must be taken to aid regions which suffer from extreme conditions of social and economic disadvantage, and that a program be undertaken to re-establish farmers in areas of extreme poverty and poor resources.

"These are ambitious programs," Mr. Sauve said. "If they are to be successful, it must be on the basis of inter-departmental co-operation and planning in both federal and provincial governments, with due co-ordination between federal and provincial governments."

The statements were included in the text of a speech issued to the press before delivery.

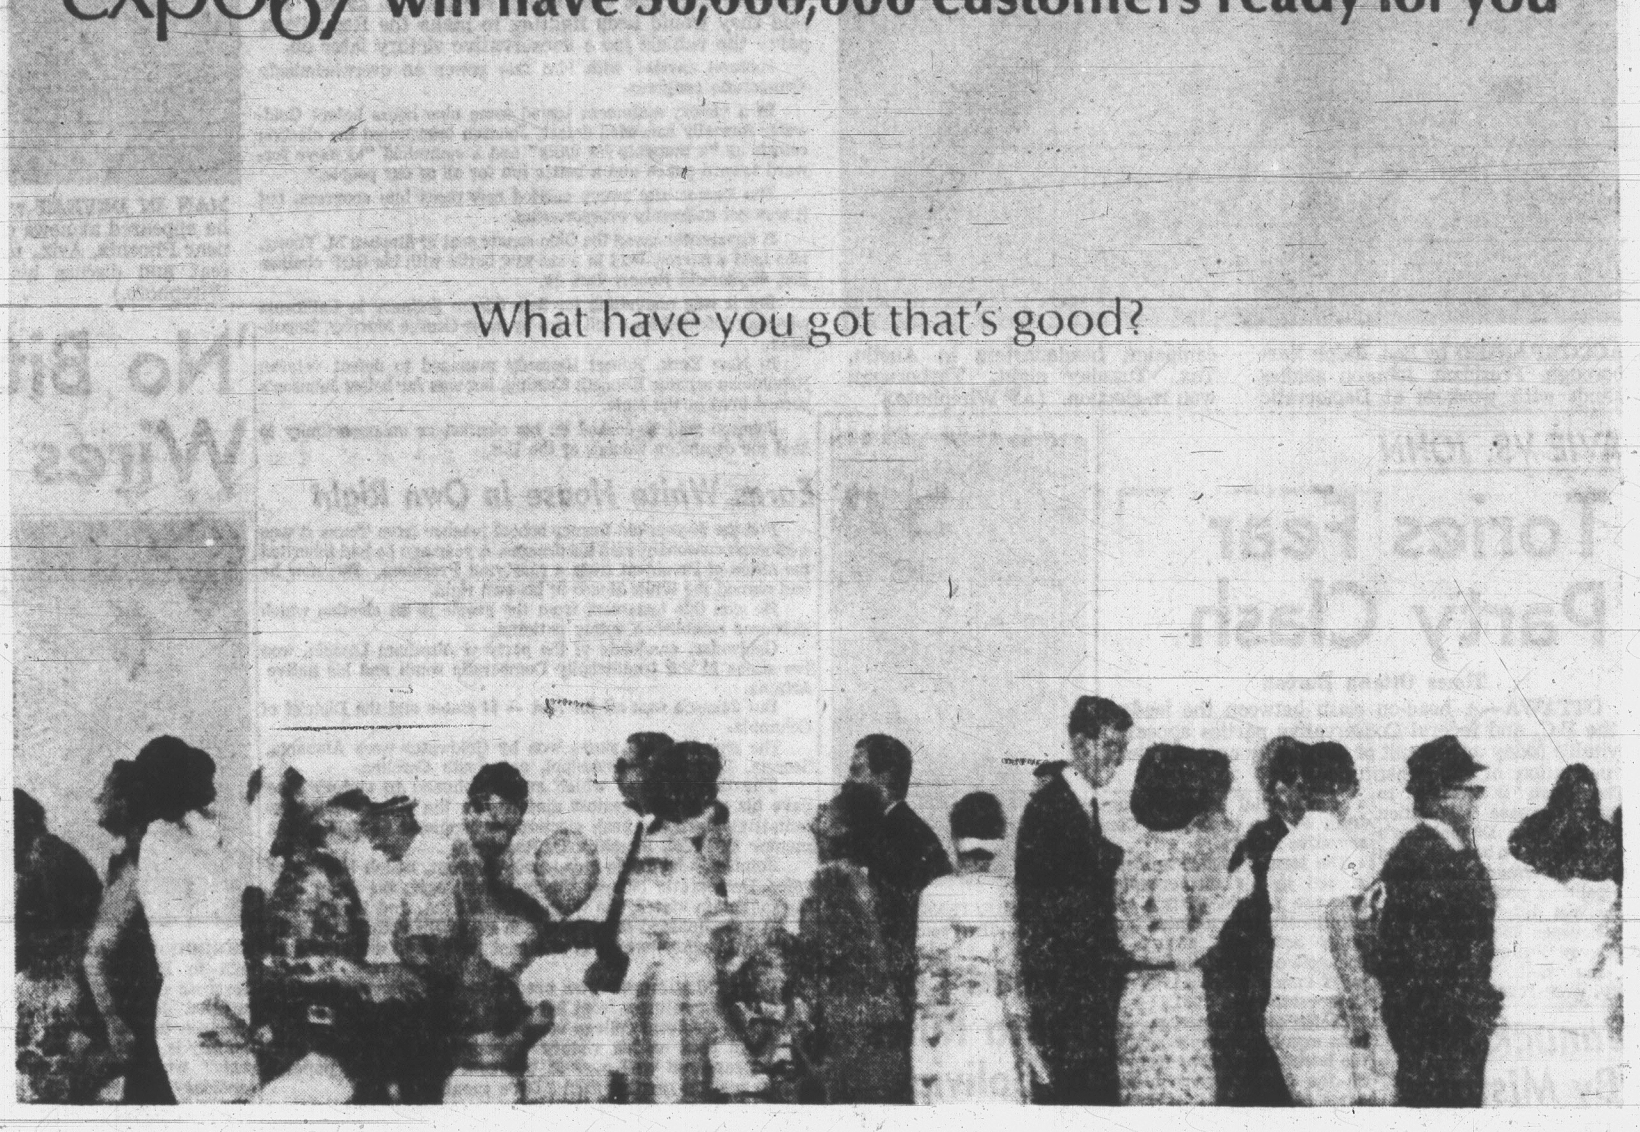
What have you got that's good?



Yes, we're talking to you, Mister (and Mrs. and Miss) "Average Reader". And we're talking to tinkers, tailors, butchers, bakers. And we're talking to the president and the sales manager of the Monumental Giant Corporation, Inc.

We want anybody with a worthwhile product or service to write us so they might benefit from EXPO '67—The Universal and International Exhibition at Montreal, April 28 to October 27, 1967.

This great, history-making enterprise in which Canada will act as host to the world offers YOU a once in a lifetime opportunity to play a role commensurate with your importance in the Canadian community.

We're talking about:

1. Products and services that could bear the emblem or name of the World Exhibition and be sold or distributed throughout Canada and the world. For these the market is bounded only by the reach of your imagination. To make and distribute them you must have a license. We are anxious to award these licenses.

2. Products and services that could be sold at our World Exhibition. For these there will be a market of 30 million people—the estimated total attendance of the Exhibition. To sell them, you must make arrangements for a Concession at the Exhibition. These we are anxious to grant. What products? What services? Concessions cover four broad fields:

Restaurants; Transportation and Parking; Amusement area; and a wide range of General Concessions including souvenirs, handicrafts and general merchandise to be sold in shops and boutiques, to Services such as shoe-shine parlors, lockers, hairdressing salons and other facilities which must be provided at a World Exhibition.

Most of all we're talking about products and services that we haven't even thought of yet—but maybe you have. Naturally we are interested in the BEST products and services and in those whose experience and knowledge in their respective fields will help us the most.

We'd like to hear from all those who are interested right now. We won't be able to act immediately in every area, but we promise to reply immediately, and discuss the matter further just as soon as we can.

Demos Boast Solid House

WASHINGTON (CP) — American voters have given President Johnson a heavily Democratic Congress with the largest majority in the House of Representatives since the 1936 landslide of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

With the totals from Tuesday's election still incomplete late this morning, the Democrats despite some surprising losses in the South had the largest number of Democratic seats since the 333 won in 1936.

Since there was little change in a Senate already top-heavy with Democrats, this meant Johnson would have a Congress so snug behind his program it might evoke memories of those early New Deal Congresses that whisked through Roosevelt's proposals.

With the final totals still pending in the 435-seat House, the Democrats had won 284, the largest majority since the Roosevelt Congress of 1936. In doing so, the Democrats took away 42 Republican places. The Republicans had won 137, gaining 10 from the Democrats, mostly in the South.

Previously, the Democrats had held a margin of 257 to 178 but the edge included many Southern conservatives who voted regularly with the Republicans.

TWO UNDECIDED

With two of the 100 Senate seats still undecided today, the Democrats had 66 seats and the Republicans 32. Only 35 of the Senate's 100 seats were contested Tuesday.

That left the Senate lineup basically unchanged from the 67-33 Democratic edge before the voting.

The new Congress features a family name which may lead to power in the years ahead, through the victory of Democrat Robert F. Kennedy, brother of the slain president, over New York Republican Senator Kenneth B. Keating. Kennedy joins another brother, Senator Edward M. Kennedy, who won re-election in Massachusetts.

Republican Robert Taft Jr., son of the late senator Robert A. Taft, trailed his Democratic opponent, Senator Stephen M. Young after having run up an early lead over the Democrat in the Ohio senatorial race.

The big story in Congress was the election of a House that seemed to shed most of its obstacles to a Johnson program. This came despite some spectacular Republican gains.

Indian Re-Elected

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — Ben Reifel, Republican member of the U.S. House of Representative from South Dakota, won re-election for a third two-year term Tuesday. Son of a Sioux mother, the Harvard-educated Reifel is the only Indian in the lower house of Congress.

HE HASN'T campaigned for more than a decade but Massachusett voters have re-elected John W. McCormack (Dem.), Speaker of the House of Representatives and first in line for the presidency should president Johnson die before Jan. 20. He has represented the state in the House since 1928.

Landslide For Johnson In Oregon

PORTLAND (AP) — Oregon went Democratic in a presidential contest for the first time in 20 years, but Republicans maintained their hold on the state Board of Control and their Congressional seat.

President Johnson won 62.6 per cent of the vote over Republican Barry Goldwater. That was the biggest percentage that any presidential candidate carried the state since Franklin D. Roosevelt got 68.5 per cent in 1936.

Roosevelt had been the last Democratic president to carry Oregon. That was in 1944.

Oregon's delegation to the U.S. House of Representatives remains the same three Democrats and one Republican.

Oregon also voted to remove the death penalty from its constitution.

It defeated measures to give the state a monopoly on industrial accident insurance, and to ban commercial fishing for salmon and steelhead in inland streams.

'GOP Mandate To Reorganize Its Thinking'

BOSTON (UPI) — Henry Cabot Lodge and Atty.-Gen. Edward W. Brooke, two of the nation's top Republican figures, today interpreted Sen. Barry Goldwater's defeat as a mandate for the GOP to reorganize its thinking.

Lodge, former ambassador to South Viet Nam and the 1960 Republican vice-presidential nominee, and Brooke, one of the highest elected Negro officials in the country, refused to endorse Goldwater.

Brooke easily won re-election to a second term Tuesday.

Lodge said President Lyndon Johnson's overwhelming victory "shows that the voters want all Americans to receive equal treatment regardless of race or color.

"They favor positive solutions to the nation's problems," he said. "They believe that foreign relations should be conducted by the president with courage, ability and prudence."

Canadians Like Election Results

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadian businessmen were quick to welcome President Johnson's election win Tuesday with many expressing the hope it offers renewed chances for progress toward knocking down international trade barriers.

With the recent move of the newly - elected Labor government in Britain in posting a 15-per - cent surcharge on many import categories fresh in their minds, they showed obvious relief at President Johnson's defeat of Senator Barry Goldwater.

"The Republican party has traditionally been associated with protectionist policies in years gone by, and it would have been difficult to guess what might have transpired in the Kennedy round of negotiations if Goldwater had won," James McAvity, president of the Canadian Export Association said in Montreal.

The Kennedy round of tariff negotiations at Geneva is aimed at achieving a major reduction of international trade barriers.

"The victory of the Democratic party, which has long been identified with a policy of easing trade barriers, must be welcome to Canadians and to all other countries who are dealing with the United States which, after all, is the world's greatest market," Mr. McAvity said.

A. C. Cumming, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association said in Toronto that Canada can only welcome President Johnson's victory.

OPPOSE BARRIERS

"In matters of trade he has already shown his opposition to the raising of barriers between the U.S. and Canada and, now that he has been given a mandate of his own by the American people, we can look forward with confidence to a continuation of this kind of good-neighbor policy."

The Canadian Importers' Association in Toronto also noted that the Democratic victory offers more hope for success in the Geneva tariff talks, in which Canada is taking part.

The association said President Johnson has continued the trade-expansion policies of the late president Kennedy.

George Hees, president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges and former federal trade and commerce minister, said in Bagotville, Que., he was "very pleased" with the election result.

"I believe that the re-election of Mr. Johnson will calm the fears held in other countries about a possible change in foreign policies by the United States."

Senate Battle in Ohio Continues to See-Saw

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Republican Robert Taft, Jr., and Democrat Stephen M. Young battled toward a cliff-hanging finish today for Young's U.S. Senate seat even as President Johnson rolled on to a record landslide in Ohio's election.

First Taft, 47, forged ahead to a comfortable 100,000 majority, then the 75-year-old Young overtook him with an avalanche of votes from Cleveland, his home town.

The Network Election Service, reporting on 12,962 polling places, had Taft ahead by 39,000.

Then, the NES put Young ahead 1,882,430 to 1,875,781 on the basis of 13,200 precincts.

MY JAMAICAN BABY

The middle-aged Canadian expectant mother was panic-stricken at the prospect of having her baby in Jamaica under what seemed relatively primitive conditions. The discovery white rum was used for disinfectant was only her SECOND most amazing experience. An unusual human interest story that will appeal to all mothers and mothers to be.

From Maine to California

PRESIDENT JOHNSON HAS retained his office with a victory of the predicted landslide proportions, and has carried an increased Democratic majority into Congress with him.

It is simple truth to say that all of the United States' allies, as well as neutral and anti-Western countries around the world, breathe more easily today because of Mr. Johnson's victory. His foreign policy of peaceful overtures from a position of strength is seen as both logical and hopeful. His domestic program of civil rights, war on poverty, and governmental economic encouragement is at one with the strong tides now flowing in most countries.

Mr. Goldwater's approach, on the other hand, roused no sense of security in friend or foe. It threatened to reverse the peaceful trend of East-West rivalry, blow into flame the cooling embers of international fear, and force all countries to review their armaments and their defensive pacts.

To many people outside the United States, and to many inside it too, Mr. Goldwater, whatever his inner intentions, stood for retrogression. That danger has now been staved off. The spirit of international co-operation that moved Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Kennedy will be allowed to continue under Mr. Johnson.

But while the overall effect of the elections will be widely approved, the domestic political situation in the United States appears to have been left in chaos. The usually difficult North went strongly Democratic; the usually Democratic Solid South—except for Texas and Florida—was gathered into the Republican fold. This was not unexpected, but there could be no preparation for the jumbled jigsaw puzzle which now presents itself as America's political map.

A large number of moderate Republicans obviously deserted their party, because of Mr. Goldwater's leadership, and voted for Democratic candidates. Vermont turned Democratic for the first time in more than 100 years, Maine broke a half century of unwavering Republican preference, and Kansas reversed a Republican trend that had been in effect for thirty years. These are no trivial changes—they may well affect the United States political pattern for a generation.

Mr. Johnson, of whom it may perhaps be said that the people gave him their votes but not their hearts, has nevertheless kept the Democratic Party intact. Whether for himself or for his successor there is a well-knit organization on which to base future victories. But Mr. Goldwater finds his Republican Party in disorder. The far-rights are straining to go to farther extremes, moderates in many thousands have revolted against the Goldwater philosophy, the centre core of the Party will be rent by the schisms which were only partially patched up for the purposes of the election campaign. The acid of defeat will further corrode the Party machine.

Mr. Johnson, whatever the diverse reasons for which support was accorded him, now has strong ratification of what he has done and a clear mandate to proceed with the plans he has publicized. For which we all may be truly thankful.

Militia Changes

THE PURPOSES OF MR. Hellyer's reduction of militia strength are clear. Canada's defence minister intends to save money and to streamline existing units of civilian-soldiers for greater efficiency and easier correlation with the regular army.

The cuts were inevitable if the government was to proceed with its announced decision to reduce the defence budget. Happily for Victoria, its 1st Battalion, Canadian Scottish Regiment, its 5th Independent Medium Field Battery and its 155 Company, Royal Canadian Army Service Corps are to be continued.

Four units located here are to disappear, presumably as the militia, like the regular force, moves to integrated operations in particular fields.

Preservation of the Canadian Scottish will undoubtedly find wide approval in this city. Victoria has on many occasions shown its pride in the regiment, both in war and in peace. Recently the Scottish received the highest honor a city can bestow upon such a unit.

For very practical reasons, however, some of the other units have been marked for disbanding. Throughout Canada, as surveys have disclosed, the militia was becoming over-supplied with officers for the number of men serving in the ranks. This probably was to be expected in peace time.

The cuts will be justified, of course, only if the money saved by them is actually saved for the benefit of Canada's taxpayers—and if stream-lining produces an effective frame that can be fleshed up with reasonable speed in an emergency.

The fact that training arrangements make provision for use by the remaining militia units of up-to-date equipment, and call for closer integration with the regular army gives an encouraging note to the pending changes. Under this plan the militia should be better prepared to meet eventualities of the future than to refight old battles with methods and weapons now obsolete.

As far as Victoria is concerned, plans here seem to safeguard the very honest pride our community takes in units of tradition and valor. Some regret is inevitable among those connected with outfits which will disband. But the role of the "Saturday night soldier" should become more important as better training facilities are furnished for those who are retained.

Part-Payment for 'Progress'

A BIOLOGIST AND AN ENGINEER in Washington state have issued a warning that dams on the Columbia River may so change the water temperature downstream that salmon and steelhead runs could be wiped out. They have, however, suggested means by which the temperature could be made more suitable and they are not dogmatic in their forecast of doom for the fish.

Since one of the dams in question, High Arrow, is planned in British Columbia, this province has a direct interest in the report of the two Americans. And since discussion crops up from time to time over the possible, if not probable, damming of streams feeding the Fraser, the subject is of more than passing concern to us.

Scientists on previous occasions have mentioned the adverse effects which certain conditions of stream flow have on fish. Introduction of new elements into the water as well as changes in rates of flow, in levels at certain seasons and in temperatures have all been cited as factors that could injure important fish runs.

They help to drive home to today's citizens a fact less obvious a few years ago, when science and engineering were accomplishing prodigies. And they open a vital consideration for future developments. It is important, as we are now learning, not only to determine how science or engineering can achieve a special goal, but also to investigate the results that will follow the achievement of that goal. Insecticides and various sprays have proved marvelously effective in checking some pests, if not eliminating them. But as a consequence of their use, Rachel Carson pointed out, great damage has been done to "innocent victims" caught in the chain reaction that followed.

Loss of salmon and steelhead runs in the lower Columbia may be of indirect importance to Canadians. But the circumstances which could cause the loss must be noted here. Repeated in British Columbia they could jeopardize one of the world's important food sources.

Killing the Sports Ideal

IN THE CHEERFUL NONSENSE of baseball's spectator activity it is common enough for a voice from the bleachers to yell "Kill the umpire."

There is no happy nonsense in the action of spectators at a Vancouver soccer game who rushed onto the field the other day intent on physical violence against the referee. This is the kind of behavior about which Canadians have read with incredulity when it occurred in some other country.

Referees, by the nature of their occupations, are fair game for criticism.

At the same time, if any vestige of sport is to remain in athletic contests, such activities by spectators should be nipped in the bud. The spectators should know — and if they don't they should be taught quickly—that attack on a referee is a breach of the peace for which they can be brought into court.

Better that they should attend a session before a magistrate than continue to give a game a black eye by unruly and threatening behavior.

ADZHUBEI AND NEPOTISM — By CHARLES BARTLETT

The Tarnished Golden Boy

ALTHOUGH the expulsion of Nikita Khrushchev was plainly triggered by his age, the new list of recriminations circulating in Moscow centres heavily upon the nepotism connected with the activities and aspirations of the ex-chairman's son-in-law, Alexei Adzhubei.

Now out as editor of Izvestia at the age of 40, Adzhubei was known to Westerners as a buoyant communist who dearly loved the potent implications of his family ties. President Kennedy greeted him prophetically, when he visited here in 1962, as a "man who combined two hazardous professions, politics and journalism."

Adzhubei's lively, impulsive personality was the key to his success as an editor. He improved the dull, official journal with innovations borrowed from the capitalist press. He was a leader in the group of young sophisticates pressing to adorn their Marxist society in urbane trappings. Some Russians complained that Izvestia had become too frivolous but the circulation rose steadily.

The key to Adzhubei's success as a politician was indubitably his father-in-law. The editor's office overlooking Gorky Square had a telephone link to the chairman's desk in the Kremlin. Adzhubei gave an impression, probably not exaggerated, that this wire was often in use. The chairman's regard for the young man became evident with his election to the Central Committee and his deepening involvement in East-West diplomacy.

Preferred Emissary

Quite apart from family ties, it is easy to understand why Khrushchev preferred Adzhubei as an emissary of co-existence over his dour Foreign Minister, Andrei Gromyko. The latter has never shed the stodgy reticence which saw him safely through the Stalin era. Adzhubei, spontaneous like Khrushchev, may not be a nobler man but his brash and cleverly off-hand manner was far better suited to the diplomatic thaw which the Chairman had in mind.

A man who wields influence without holding office attracts the animosities of men who have offices but little influence. Adzhubei had the fault, well noted by his critics, of being sometimes rude to equals and obsequious to his father-in-law. But also had the spirit to collect abstract sculpture during the period in which Khrushchev was inveighing against modern art.

Adzhubei's last major mission, the visit to West Germany that was to serve as a prelude to a December visit by Khrushchev, seems to have been the one that rankled most in the Foreign Ministry. This was a major turn in Soviet policy and Khrushchev's exclusion of the bureaucracy from the preparations was taken as a sign of growing high-handedness.

Adzhubei may have sharpened this criticism by asserting in West Germany that Walter Ulbricht, the Communist leader in East Germany, was dying of cancer. Ulbricht, who has looked quite well to recent visitors, undoubtedly disliked his doom being bandied among the enemy. It was perhaps more than a coincidence that Khrushchev was toppled one day after Leonid Brezhnev returned from a visit to East Germany.

Promotion Planned

Khrushchev, who hinted many times at impending retirement, obviously knew that Adzhubei's fortunes would be damaged by the step. He was rumored last spring to be planning to promote his son-in-law to Foreign Minister and more recently to be grooming him for First Secretary of the party. The present charges of nepotism against Khrushchev reflect earlier concerns that he wanted to establish a line of succession.

Khrushchev himself may have unleashed the events of October 12 when he spoke informally to a youth group on September 19. He remarked that he had reached "a rather venerable age" and that he was glad to see the young come forward because "the older generation is retiring."

Impatient with their uncertainty about the future and alarmed over Adzhubei, the ambitious men in the Kremlin may have decided then that the time had come to take the initiative. One of the weaknesses of the Soviet political system is that it does not provide an orderly, dignified transition between regimes.

One of the legal experts charged with drafting the new Soviet constitution remarked in 1962 that he and his colleagues had not found a means to insure a graceful transfer of Kremlin power at reasonable intervals. "The two-term limit that you place on your presidents would be an obvious answer for us," he said with a smile. "But I am afraid we will never get it adopted."

DENNIS THE MENACE

CHINA'S EXPLOSION — By DENNIS BLOODWORTH

Profit From the Bang

MOSCOW has been taken aback by the speed of Communist China's advance to nuclear status. Only after mid-August of this year did the Russians begin to agree with the Americans that a Chinese atomic test was imminent.

Soviet experts like Milhail Klochko, who was in China in 1958 and 1960, had written that China was hampered not only by lack of funds and the specialised industries required for the development of a 'militarily useful" atomic potential, but that the prior need to reorganize completely her entire educational system, her training of scientists and technicians, and their working conditions" would prove an even greater obstacle.

On October 15, 1957, Moscow promised in writing to provide Peking with "a sample of an atom bomb and technical data about its manufacture." But the Russians never fulfilled this agreement, and although they supplied the first 'experimental 10,000-kw reactor to Peking in 1958, they showed a marked reluctance to put wheels (as against skids) under the Chinese nuclear project.

In Soviet Scientist in Red China Klochko notes that Moscow only sent medium-grade chemists and physicists to China, and relates how one expert based all his nuclear lectures to the Chinese on American publications only, because nearly all Soviet writings were classified documents as far as Peking was concerned. The Sino-Soviet dispute then sharpened, and in 1960 the Russians withdrew their technicians and suspended all aid.

Limped Along

Suddenly deprived of its Soviet crutch, Chinese industry developed a pronounced limp, and as bureaucratic muddle and disastrous harvests conspired to half-wreck the national economy, Peking ruthlessly cut back most national development programs. However, military needs were given first priority, and it now appears that this also extended to a narrow, concentrated nuclear effort. China has her own uranium, and by 1960 she already had four reactors.

At the beginning of 1963 Japanese intelligence reportedly estimated that the Communists had enough plutonium to make at least two atomic bombs of the type dropped on Hiroshima. Today they may have enough for seven or even 10. It may be ten years, however, before China has devised a "portable" warhead and moved from that to production of the H-bomb and an effective vehicle to deliver it against an enemy.

It is in the mid-1970s, for example, that the Chinese Nationalists in Formosa may begin to have serious strategic worries. At present they are using the explosion to urge the Americans that they should be supported in an assault against the mainland "in order to destroy the Peking regime before it actually possesses nuclear weapons and destroys the world."

The Nationalists are immediately concerned about the psychological blow the Chinese blast may strike at the morale of the native Formosans, upon whom President Chiang Kai-shek now relies for at least four out of five of his soldiers.

Meanwhile, however, China's nuclear success will be claimed in Peking as a vindication of the policies of the sectarian group within the Chinese Communist Party of which Mao Tse-tung is still undisputed leader. This is the group that quarrelled so bitterly with the Soviet Union, that has refused to bow down before the false gods of peaceful co-existence and "modern revisionism" in order to get Russian aid, that preaches permanent world revolution, exports sabotage and subversion, and has insisted that China tighten her frayed belt and "go it alone".

Vindicating Mao

Already the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party has attributed the success of China's big bang to the "correctness" of Mao's isolationist thinking, and to "the general line of going all out, aiming high, achieving greater, faster, better, more economical results in bulding Socialism". It is the line that dictates "Politics commands all", that cast-iron Communist dogma and not the hard facts of economic life must decide the strategy of China's development into a modern industrial, Socialist Power.

This policy, which becomes particularly inflexible when some event has made Chinese leaders over-confident, engendered the tragi-farcical industrial debacle of the "Great Leap Forward" in 1958, the regimented and outstandingly inefficient People's Communes, and the near-collapse of the crunch-drunk Chinese economy two years ago. And now their atomic blast has doubtless raised the morale of the Chinese high enough for their leaders to risk another "Marxist-Leninist" experiment in social vivisection.

Yet nothing succeeds like success, and within the international Communist movement nuclear China, with her aggressive policy of all-out revolutionary struggle against the capitalist camp, must win greater influence and a more numerous following — especially in underdeveloped countries. In a wider field there will be moves prompted by respect or fear to induce Peking to sign the partial nuclear test-ban treaty, to curb China's potential for violence by bringing her under the club-rules of the U.N.

And not without reason. In 1957 Communist Chinese leaders coolly suggested in conversations with their Soviet allies that although an atomic trial of strength might destroy half mankind, Socialism would emerge triumphant and those that were left (notably some 300 million Chinese) would enjoy a "really beautiful future". The Russians were not favourably impressed.

The taming of China is therefore a race against time.

As Our Readers See It

Piano Fund

It has frequently been observed that Victoria is a cultural backwater, yet last Wednesday music lovers in this city were granted an opportunity of hearing the great Sviatoslav Richter performing a program worthy of the famous musical capitals of the world. What makes us especially fortunate is that Mr. Richter's concert was an exception to his rule of performing only in the large centres. Perhaps a second precedent resulted for him in that the theatre was not sold out.

If he did us the honor of coming, we in Victoria have not repaid him in kind. As is well known, a pianist is the least fortunate of instrumentalists, since his own Bechstein, Steinway or Chappell must remain at home to be exchanged for whatever his host city sees fit to provide. If I am not mistaken, for the past 10 years or more touring pianists have pronounced the Steinway on the Royal Victoria stage as dead as Beethoven himself. Yet each year we complacently serve up this undelectable instrument to whatever unsuspecting artist comes to us. This time it was Richter. Shouldn't it be the last? After all, pianos, unlike Beethoven, can be replaced.

May I make a suggestion that a fund be established to enable the community to purchase a splendid new instrument with which, at not much expense for the artistic satisfaction involved, we could provide more courteously for those pianists who risk the Straits to visit us.

Splendid Hospital

Many thanks to doctors, nurses, orderlies, maids, Red Cross and the Ladies' Auxiliary, Britannia Branch No. 1, Royal Canadian Legion, and staff for the great kindness shown to me during my stay in this splendid hospital (Veterans' Hospital). It is up to the veterans to see that this grand staff is rewarded for the good work that they perform.

F. CROASDALE.

There is no doubt the motives prompting such a project are most sincere and worthy of the highest commendation, but we question whether the end results can justify the means of attaining such.

Further there is some doubt as to the need for additional effort in this particular field of community service, for there is at present in this area an adequate supply of wheelchairs, etc., available on loan, without cost, from the Canadian Red Cross Society and several other dedicated, non-profit humanitarian organizations.

The 800 Pacific Wing, RCAF, Association are to be commended for their desire to help the less fortunate and we earnestly hope they will give some consideration to the foregoing remarks to the end that their contribution to the community may be of the utmost effectiveness.

Worried About Fireworks?

It would be a healthy change if the paragons of virtue, in fact all of us adults, took a long look at each other and paused to think while we leave the children alone for awhile.

Some civic worthies of our Island towns and cities seem concerned over children and teen-age behavior with fireworks. Would they but look skywards and view huge aircraft carrying the largest fireworks the world has ever known, and then think. Would they but read and think, the realization might dawn that every acre of our earth can be amply provided with complete destruction.

Come now, adults, grow up! Your children are in grave danger; not from their fireworks but from yours.

Dastardly Action

It is with horror we read that our Saanich neighbours are thinking of shooting crows. Those poor, harmless creatures that greet us each time we take our Sunday drive into the country with a friendly caw, caw, caw.

This dastardly action will have serious effects on Mini Metro.

Handicapping Handicapped

The livelihood of a number of handicapped persons in this area will be seriously endangered should the 800 Pacific Wing, RCAF, Association carry out its announced intention of soliciting magazine subscriptions for the purpose of financing its project, which is to make wheelchairs, crutches and sick-room equipment available to any resident of Vancouver Island.

These handicapped people depend on the magazine subscription business (new and renewals) for a living and in spite of heavy competition and their own physical obstacles, are exerting every effort to hold their own. It seems obvious the competition they would face from an organized campaign such as proposed by the RCAF Association would be disastrous.

Medicare

It is indeed encouraging and gratifying to read the remarks of Dr. Peter Banks on the subject of medicare. If this spirit continues I can see no reason why a health plan, acceptable to the medical profession and the people of this province, cannot be implemented at an early date.

The plan must contain provisions for the following:

(1) Compulsory for all. I regret to see that Dr. Banks mentioned help from the government for those who cannot afford the premiums of the existing plans. Such a provision would imply a "means test" which is unacceptable to the people.

(2) Doctors must be completely free of all interference from government officials in all matters of their profession. In other words the technical end of a health plan must remain in the hands of the doctors.

(3) Similarly the question of the payment of fees is a matter for the representatives of the people. In addition doctors must not be permitted to increase fees without negotiations with the government. In case of disagreement arbitration machinery must handle the problem.

(4) The patient must be permitted to choose his doctor and change him in case he is not satisfied.

In a spirit of co-operation, I cannot see why we Canadians cannot do something which has been done in many other countries where satisfactory health plans are in operation.

NATURE ON THE ISLAND — By CLIFFORD CARL

Grubs Try Hard to Be Boring

One of the most abundant and widespread materials in nature is wood and because of this it is used in innumerable ways by a host of different kinds of animals—as building material, as cover, as a raft and even occasionally as a plaything. Strangely enough, however, very few animals have the ability to use it directly as food. In fact only three groups of animals can eat and digest cellulose and these are as widely separated as they can be in the animal kingdom.

Carl

The first is the insect group. Perhaps it isn't surprising to find that in this group which is not only the largest in the animal kingdom, but which also contains the greatest diversity of form, there are two types which regularly eat wood, namely, the wood-boring beetles and the termites. Both work under cover but come to notice when they are in conflict with man and sometimes their appearance is dramatic.

Grubs of wood-borers are sometimes discovered when wood is being split for fuel. Several kinds are small, not more than an inch in legth, but the larvae of the two largest are giants in size, measuring more than four inches long and being correspondingly fat. When these tumble out of a freshly-split log, leaving a hole big enough to take your thumb, they immediately attract attention.

Limbless Body

To most persons these grubs are repulsive in appearance. The wrinkled, limbless body is dead white or cream in color and it alternately stretches and contracts in a helpless manner.

The broader end, which is the head, is capped with a chitinous cover and is armed with a pair of rather powerful jaws. As the naked animal writhes and twists on the ground it gives one the impression it should be charged with indecent exposure!

Unattractive as it is the grub of the wood-borer is a remarkable animal. It can live in wood for several years, eating nothing but the wood itself. When full grown it may pupate in the wood or in soil and then emerge as an adult beetle capable of flying to places suitable for mating and egg-laying. Presumedly, in the larval stage these insects have the ability of digesting cellulose as wood is their only food. Not only do they derive energy from the wood but also materials from which they synthetize proteins, fats and water.

However, the degree of dryness of the wood seems to have some influence on the length of the larval life. There is a case on record of flat-headed borers emerging from a house-wall 15 years after construction. It would seem that growth is very slow in seasoned lumber.

Social Castes

Termites, another group of insect wood-eaters, differ greatly from the beetle-borers. In the first place they are colonial in habit, many individuals representing several social castes, live together to mutual advantage. They can exist only in wood containing some moisture; they can operate in dry wood only when a water source is easily available.

Secondly, they remain permanently within their wooden empire. Only kings and queens emerge periodically from the colony and then for the purpose of establishing new colonies elsewhere.

And, thirdly, while they eat wood, they are incapable of digesting it themselves and consequently they are entirely dependant upon microscopic animals in their gut which break down the cellulose for them. This interdependence between two vastly different creatures—a complex insect and a minute protozoan—has no parallel in nature.

To complete the list of wood-eaters one should add the powder-post beetles, the bark-beetles, the beaver and porcupine, which actually eat very little wood, and the marine wood-borers. The latter deserve special mention at a later date.

YOUR HEALTH — By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Comfort, Hope for Patients

I just received a letter telling me of the work of a foundation which is concerned with the strange paralyses, such as myatonia congenita. Already much research on these related diseases is going forward in many hospitals and universities in England and in this country.

Alvarez

I am always happy to hear of such foundations because many are collecting money for research, and they are giving comfort and hope to the lonely patients who, perhaps confined to a bed in a room, are glad to belong to an organization of fellow sufferers. Then they are not so alone and they know that when some new and helpful drug is found, they will quickly be told about it.

According to an article in The Saturday Evening Post, there are 250,000 Americans who are disabled by muscular dystrophies (with weak muscles that do not develop well). In the article, Mr. Berland tells of a family of ten in which three of the young people are confined to wheelchairs.

He also tells us that there are at least five forms of muscular dystrophy: the most tragic of which is the one in which children, when six or seven years old, are stricken. As the child's body grows, his muscles shrink and deteriorate until by the time he is 15, he has less muscle that he had when he was five years old.

Because of the weakness of their muscles, these children develop a marked swayback and have a peculiar waddling gait. They fall down frequently and have difficulty getting upstairs. After some years they often have trouble with breathing, because of weakness of the muscles of the chest wall.

As in the case of bleeders, women almost never get the paralytic disease, but some are carriers, who can pass the disease on to their sons. The article in the Post tells of the research of Dr. Dowben, who has found that his treatment has helped 34 out of 37 patients on whom it was tried. His treatment consists of drugs and exercise.

Much of the research today is being done on laboratory mice which have the disease. This strain of mice was developed in 1956 at the great Roscoe B. Jackson Memorial Laboratory in Bar Harbor, Maine. The disease of the mice was recognized when they dragged their hind feet.

As I keep saying in this column, one of the most fortunate things that can happen to research workers who are trying to find a cure for some rare hereditary disease is to find that it occurs in one or more animals.

Using the paralyzed mice, Dr. Dowben found that a combination of digitoxin and a special androstelonone prolonged the life of the dystrophic mice from the usual 18 weeks to 42 weeks. Dr. Dowben does not claim that these drugs work a cure, but he is satisfied that often, for a time, they hold the disease in check.

Dr. A. L. T. Milhorat, chairman of the advisory board of the Muscular Dystrophy Association, and director of its Institute for Muscle Disease, is not yet satisfied, however, that the Dowben treatment works.

Some workers in this field of medicine are able to help the young patients by perhaps cutting their contracted heel cords, and then fitting braces. With physiotherapy they can keep these youngsters out of bed for quite a while.

SYNOPSIS — A continuing flow of moist air from the Pacific across B.C. promises to maintain another day of cloudy, showery weather over much of the province. During the night a ridge of high pressure is expected to build from the southwest across Vancouver Island and extend into the interior. Clearing will take place in the vicinity of the ridge and allow tonight's temperatures to fall a few degrees lower than Tuesday night. Meanwhile, there is another Pacific storm moving eastward through the Gulf of Alaska which will bring rain and southerly gales to the north coast by early Thursday morning. Cloudiness from this system will gradually spread down the coast and into the northern interior during the day.

HOME GARDEN

We Need Every Leaf For Humus-Shy Soil

By HILDA BEASTALL

Falling leaves cause poets and columnists to use up typewriters and paper in their praise, but seldom does a kind word come from gardeners of cultivated ground.

Hilda

We gardeners are enthusiastic in spring over bursting buds and new green leaves unfolding, in summer over the canopy of leaves as a shield from the sun's hot rays, and in fall we are enraptured by the tints and tones of scarlet, bronze and gold.

Why can we not apply our gardening philosophy to falling leaves?

In our humus-poor coastal soils we need every leaf which blows our way, whether it comes from down the street, across the street or from the trees on our own lot.

If we have managed to keep up with our gardening, the falling leaves come just at the time when a mass of other material is ready to be composted.

Layers of discarded plant material can be built up alternately with layers of leaves, each layer being sprinkled with some of the best garden soil and a little compost activator or fertilizer.

Few gardeners have too much compost for returning to the soil, but those who cannot handle more should have no difficulty in finding others, less fortunate, who would be pleased to remove the surplus.

Many years ago I knew a local gardener whose property was knee deep in leaves every fall. For the price of one classified advertisement each year his half acre was cleared by compost-starved contemporaries.

JUSTICE OVERHAUL

Quebec to Strike At Organized Crime

QUEBEC (CP)—Claude Wagner, recently appointed Quebec attorney - general, announced plans Monday for a major overhaul of laws governing the administration of justice in Quebec.

He told a press conference he also intends to deport leading members of the international Mafia organization as part of a stepped - up battle against crime.

Mr. Wagner said "no liberties, civil or otherwise, should suffer in the repression of terrorism" and that the civil liberties of separatists will be respected as long as they remain witnin the law.

He criticized instructions issued by two Quebec daily newspapers to their news staffs, to limit in prominence and ban some reports about separatism, nationalism and protests against established authority.

The attorney - general said new legislation now is being prepared which will "upset certain traditional notions" and bring an end to "hypocrisy" in the law. Specific legislation mentioned was Quebec's code of civil procedure, liquor laws, the Coroner's Act and establishment of a police commission for the entire province.

As an example of "hypocritical" laws, Mr. Wagner mentioned Sunday liquor regulations which allow alcohol to be served only with a meal—"a glass of tomato juice and a soda cracker."

'CAN STOP MAFIA'

Turning to the Mafia which he had previously said has a foothold in Montreal, Mr. Wagner said police are beginning to uncover the extent of the underworld "and we believe we can stop it."

He said a permanent Crown prosecutor in Montreal is gathering statements from people placed "fairly high up" in the ranks of organized crime. This move was made after his meeting with representatives of the department of immigration in Ottawa.

In answer to a reporter's question asking whether his department wishes to deport Mafia criminals, he replied: "Certainly. That's why we are working with the federal immigration department.

"It is obvious that this work is done discreetly," he said, adding it is not in the public interest to disclose results immediately.

Mr. Wagner was asked whether the instructions issued by Quebec Le Soleil and L'Evenement formed part of a "campaign against extremism" in the province.

"Press censorship is a form of extremism," he replied. "Instructions of this kind open the door to eventual and serious attacks upon the freedom of the press. In my opinion, instructions of that kind are to be condemned."

IN WEST INDIES

New Federation Formed

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (CP-Reuters)—A new West Indies federation has been agreed upon by seven of Britain's islands in the Caribbean.

Delegates of the "little seven" grouping — Barbados, Antigua, Dominica, Monserrat, St. Kitts, St. Lucia and St. Vincent — agreed at a meeting that ended at the weekend to resume talks Dec. 7 for formation of an independent new federation. Grenada has decided to remain out of the grouping.

A post-meeting announcement did not give any date for the federation to come into being, but usually well informed sources said it would be as early in 1965 as possible.

Discussion on the proposed new federation have been going on since January, 1962, after the original West Indian Federation was wrecked by Jamaica's decision to seek independence alone and the subsequent withdrawal of Trinidad.

The new federation, like the old, is to be called the West Indies, the council of ministers decided.

The government of each unit of the federation, they said, should be granted full, internal self-government before the federation is formed.

No unit is to be allowed to secede from the federation without the agreement of all the other unit governments.

To be put under federal authority, the council decided, will be customs and excise, income tax, the police training school and a nucleus of police and prisons, telecommunications except for broadcasting, television and telephone services within each component of the federation, civil aviation and meteorology.

A customs union and a free trade area is to set up after the federation comes into being.

REFORM PLAN OUTLINED

Wilson Blasts MP On Racial Vote

LONDON (UPI)—The opposition Conservative party dug the first rut in the Labor government's road to a socialist Britain today. It was in the form of a motion condemning Prime Minister Harold Wilson for calling a Conservative MP a "parliamentary leper."

The motion meant Wilson and his Labor government must take time out, probably next week, to defend itself. Labor had planned to present a new budget full of tax innovations and centralized economic planning measures.

Wilson's attack on Conservative MP Peter Griffiths came on the opening day of Parliament, just after the government had presented legislative plans embodying steel nationalization, higher pensions and teachers' pay, central planning, incomes and rent controls and a host of other sweeping reforms.

Wilson referred to Griffith's election victory Oct. 15 on a "white backlash" in the racially mixed constituency of Smethwick and added:

"He will serve his term here as a parliamentary leper."

Twenty Conservatives walked out. But Griffiths himself stayed in the House of Commons. Later leading Tories tabled the motion "condemning" Wilson's choice of words.

The motion was not a censure motion and thus a defeat for Wilson would not bring down his government. But it was believed to be the first time since the Second World War that a prime minister had been the subject of such a motion. Wilson was expected to rally his backers to defeat it.

Wilson's legislative program, as set out in the throne speech, read to a joint parliamentary session by Queen Elizabeth, was deliberately vague on many of Labor's plans.

It was believed Wilson was still planning his tactics for herding his controversial program through a Parliament in which his party holds a five seat majority, one of the narrowest margins in history.

COLORFUL Democratic Governor Orval Faubus of Arkansas was re-elected Tuesday night for sixth two-year term. Faubus, 54, who became widely known during the 1957 Little Rock integration crisis, defeated Republican Winthrop Rockefeller, brother of New York's Governor Nelson Rockefeller.

RCMP Talks Collapse; Bonner 'No Happier'

(TIMES OTTAWA BUREAU)

OTTAWA — Federal-provincial discussions on revised cost-sharing for RCMP provincial policing collapsed Tuesday with Attorney General Robert Bonner "no happier" about proposed arrangements.

However he was optimistic that the federal government would modify its stand when meetings resume either Nov. 30 or Dec. 8.

He has taken strong objections to a change in the percentage of federal - provincial sharing which Ottawa wishes to establish under a new contract for the eight provinces using the RCMP as a provincial force.

It would mean that British Columbia's assessment would increase from $2.4 million to about $4 million annually. Bonner feels there is no basis for a radical change particularly when the whole area of federal-provincial fiscal arrangements is under review.

The out-spoken attorney-general walked out of the final session of the two-day talks in a jovial mood as business was adjourned a day early.

When asked how the meeting had ended he said "Not with a bang—but with a whimper."

"I'm no happier than I was," he said, "but we held them off at the pass."

In any circumstance where the federal government is "gambling" with provincial money "you're always a winner if you hang onto what you have," Bonner quipped.

He said Justice Minister Guy Favreau and his officials had been forcefully acquainted with provincial objections to the increase in their share.

"I have every reason to believe that the federal approach will be considerably modified when we meet again," Bonner said.

QUEBEC COPY EDITORS, STAFF WANT 'HONOR' RESTORED

80 Reporters Rebel Against 'Yellow Journalism' Charge

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — Eighty reporters on two French-language Quebec City dailies Tuesday night rebelled against management and, through their union, served notice they would sue for $100,000 unless the owners retracted "slanderous" directives made to the editorial staffs.

The notice of legal action, written on the stationary of two local lawyers, stemmed from complaints by management on the treatment accorded stories during the Queen's visit here last month.

In a letter addressed and distributed last Oct. 22 to the 12 copy editors of the morning daily "L'Evenement", and the afternoon daily "Le Soleil", both published by the same firm, managing director Jean Charles de Ladurantaye accused the editorial staff of having committed yellow and sensational journalism.

He said both papers, through the blowing up and sensationalizing of security precautions and prominent space given to declarations of separatists, had largely contributed to the unfavorable climate which reigned in the city.

In his letter, De Ladurantaye gave his deskmen the choice of quitting or obeying his directives to end the printing of declarations by separatist and independists alike.

In addressing their notice to A. F. Mercier, general manager and vice-president of "Le Soleil", the Syndicat Des Journalistes de Quebec Inc. demanded a public apology and retraction of these "slanderous" directives in order to restore the "honor and dignity" of the syndicate members.

The syndicate, whose two-year contract with "Le Soleil" ends Dec. 14, denied that its members on both papers had committed yellow and sensational journalism.

SHAGGY-HAIRED TYPES BANNED IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland's public hall and other city facilities no longer will be available to the Beatles or similar singing groups, Mayor Ralph S. Locher said Tuesday.

"Such groups do not add to the community's culture or entertainment," Locher said in announcing the ban.

The ban went into effect after Tuesday night's public hall appearance of the Rolling Stones, another group of shaggy-haired English singers.

FRENCH NETWORK

Purge of CBC Radio Demanded

OTTAWA (CP)—The French network of the CBC was accused of spreading subversive ideas and of indecency in the Commons Tuesday by two Quebec MPs.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said the government should purge Radio-Canada of supervisory personnel who fill the airwaves with Communist, socialist, separatist and terrorist ideas.

Theogene Ricard (PC—St. Hyacinthe-Bagot) said some Radio-Canada dramas are "absolutely indecent . . . an invitation to misbehave."

They spoke as debate on a $740,000,000 interim supply measure rolled on for the eighth straight day. The resolution preceding the bill was passed just before adjournment and today debate continues on second reading stage.

Unless the bill is passed within a week, the government will be unable to pay ordinary expenses and a general election would become virtually inevitable.

Most of Tuesday's speakers were Conservatives, who ranged over such issues as the flag, federal-provincial relations, biculturalism and broadcasting.

CALLED SUBVERSIVE

Mr. Caouette said Radio-Canada should reflect Canada as it really is, but instead disproportionate time was given to subversive elements in news and public affairs programs.

Administrative positions in Montreal had been infiltrated by socialists, Communists and separatists, he charged. A "clean sweep" was imperative to protect the interests of Canadians.

Mr. Ricard said pro-Liberal slanting of news and commentaries and political patronage are rampant at Radio-Canada.

Conservative speakers attacked the whole 18-month record of the Pearson government.

Robert C. Coates (PC—Cumberland) said it is difficult to say how the country would vote if an election were held tomorrow.

There were too many parties in the Commons and the provincial governments were extracting too much power from the Liberals.

"This government has been accident-prone since the day it took office," he said.

Cossacks Thrill Near-Capacity City Audience

By PETER MATTHEWS

The highly individual style and timbre of the Don Cossack Chorus has not changed materially through the 20 years it has been touring North America and beyond, despite complete changes in personnel.

Conductor Nicholas Kostrukoff, who led his 25 male voices through an extensive program Tuesday night at Central Junior Secondary School, has maintained the superior standard which he established years ago.

THRILLING

Texture and quality of tone is thrilling and of equal beauty whether it is being used for those disembodied pianissimos or the organesqe fortes.

The program was full of familiar and special items—Monotonously Rings the Little Bell, Kaleenka, Soldiers Song, for example—that one has learned to regard almost as a trademark of the Don Cossacks.

And once again this music proved what vast resources of coloration the chorus commands and that Kostrukoff uses and controls this color with superb effectiveness.

NEAR-CAPACITY

Inevitably the solo parts with which the program was liberally sprinkled, revealed bass, baritone and tenor voices of exceptional beauty, admirably trained in the Russian style.

The large audience which came close to a capacity crowd, gave the ensemble repeated ovations and was particularly enthusiastic in response to the noted and spectacular dances always a feature of these concerts.

The event was sponsored by the Douglas Rotary Club of Victoria.

Kanester Remanded Without Plea

PORT COQUITLAM (CP) — Convicted rapist Larry Kanester of Victoria was remanded without plea until Nov. 10 when he appeared in court here Tuesday charged with escaping lawful custody.

Kanester escaped Sept. 2 from the Essondale Mental Hospital, but turned himself over to police here last week. He was taken back to Essondale and later was transferred to Oakalla prison farm.

$2,000 Grant Approved For Ferry

NANAIMO — The provincial cabinet Tuesday approved a $2,000 grant to Herbert Davis of Nanaimo, to provide a temporary ferry service to Lasqueti Island.

The service has been authorized for two months or until new tenders are called for continuation of the service from French Creek, just north of Parksville.

The former passenger ferry to the island was put out of commission when it hit a deadhead Oct. 21.

BEAUTY— NOT BRAWN ON FLOAT

CALGARY (CP)—Carroyl Taylor, Miss Calgary Stampeder, will ride the Calgary float at the New Year's Day Rose Bowl parade in Pasadena, Calif., ending speculation that the rider might be Lorne Greene, Bob Goulet or Johnny Weissmuller.

An official of the Calgary Tourist and Convention Association said today it is "quite definite" that Miss Taylor will grace the float, accompanied by a bevy of beauties from the Pasadena area.

It is the first time a Canadian float has been accepted to appear in the 76-year-old parade.

Miss Taylor is being sponsored by a supermarket chain.

Greene, star of the television western Bonanza, had been asked by the tourist association to ride on the float but has already been committed to act as parade commentator.

SUSAN KELLY
. . . Miss Joint Appeal

$39.60 Leg Up Given to Appeal

A lounge-full of male students leered at 21 pairs of lovely legs.

Forty-two dimpled knees winked back.

Within 10 minutes a unanimous, five-man judging panel picked the slickest pair of pins in the place—those of 17-year-old Susan Kelly, 2134 Granite.

The packed gallery paid a total of $39.60 to witness the exhibition, brainchild of University of Victoria student newspaper The Martlet.

The cash goes to the United Appeal, Martlet editor Peter Bower said, to demonstrate the university's community spirit.

MALES OUT

Fourteen campus organizations fielded 24 leggy entries in the contest, three failing to qualify on a technicality. They were men.

Judge Ronald Jeffels, university registrar, went on a limb to stress the concern of his cohorts that "no artificial aids" would be tolerated and that a "true Canadian representative of fleshly—a very fine pair of legs" was their ultimate choice.

Miss Kelly, one of four girls sponsored by the Radio Club, was given a huge plaque of fresh carnations; the runners-up a nosegay each.

"The judges," Mr. Jeffels declared with pleasure, "hope to be asked to return to judge other parts of the female anatomy" should the occasion arise.

Other members of the judging team were club director Rolli Cacchioni, student union proctor Dick Chudley, Martlet editor Charles La Vertu and Times reporter Ab Kent.

Man Won't Name $17,000 Poker Loser

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan Tuesday held John Brosseuk, Coquitlam businessman, in contempt of court after Brosseuk defied a supreme court order to name the loser of $17,000 in a poker game.

The matter developed as a side issue in a motor vehicle mishap damage claim Brosseuk brought against Michael Ellis of West Vancouver. The supreme court judge stayed Brosseuk claim against Ellis.

Brosseuk, acting on his physician's orders, failed to appear in court following the noon adjournment but will be given the opportunity to purge his contempt before any further steps are taken.

Earlier Brosseuk, testifying under the protection of the Canada Evidence Act, told the court of his business and gambling dealings in evidence in connection with an alleged loss of earnings resulting from the motor vehicle mishap.

Brosseuk testified he had won $17,000 from a man in a card game but under cross examination refused to name the "important" man concerned.

Mr. Justice Ruttan ordered Brosseuk to name the man and warned refusal to do so would place him in contempt.

Brosseuk replied: "I would rather be a liar and take the blame for that than hurt someone else. On oath I am now saying that my story about gambling is a complete fabrication."

Company Earnings Soar

By GORDON BELL
Times Business Editor

Maybe, as many people claim, stock prices are too high these days, but the recent batch of reports on company earnings gives clear indication of why the prices are up.

Bell

Among some of the representative companies reporting results for the first three-quarters of the year are:

Bell Telephone with net income of $56,364,738 or $1.98 a share compared with $50,550,424 or $1.92 a share for the same period last year;

Dominion Car and Chemical with $17,806,000 or $1.20 a share against $14,060,000 or 95 cents a share—a whopping 26.6 per cent increase;

Shell Canada consolidated profit of $1,982,071 compared with $1,781,955;

Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line net profit of $6,747,000 or 89.7 cents per share versus $5,429,000 or 72.1 cents per share for an increase of 24.5 per cent.

RECORD EARNINGS

Union Carbide of Canada, which recently sold $60 million worth of its shares in this country, was another company with record earnings for the first nine months this year. Net income was up 26 per cent over last year at $8,514,000 or 85 cents a share. Sales hit a new all-time high of $95,745,000, up 17 per cent.

Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting had net profit of $9,663,109, equal to $3.50 a share for the nine months compared with $8,561,024 or $3.10 a share in the corresponding period of 1963.

One of the biggest gainers, on a percentage basis was Price Bros. which reported net profit for the first three quarters of $7,647,000 or $2.37 a share against $4,648,000 or $1.42 a share, just short of a 60 per cent increase.

Also strong was Husky Oil Canada which posted a 54 per cent gain on a nine-month profit of $2,467,000 compared with last year.

* * *

Canada's largest steelmaker, Steel Company of Canada, had record sales and profits for the nine months but it was not fully reflected in per share earnings due to increased capitalization compared with the same period last year.

Profit was $32,313,799 or $1.44 a share compared with $27,552,778 or $1.36 a share in 1963. Sales were up by $83,997,711 to $360,990,556, including operations of Page-Hershey Tubes.

Scores of other companies, large and small, have already been heard from and, almost without exception, have chalked up record or near-record performances so far this year.

* * *

Commonwealth Trust of Vancouver, which claims to be B.C.'s fastest-growing trust company, forecasts earnings before taxes for the year ended Sept. 30 of approximately $132,000 in contrast to the deficit of $107,000 for the previous fiscal year.

The company now holds deposits of $6.5 million, an increase of 26 per cent since the June total of $4,837,052 and more than double the deposits at the end of the previous year.

Commonwealth plans to open six new branches in the coming year and says that a key figure in the expansion movement will be Dr. J. V. Fisher who was elected to the board last month following his retirement as B.C.'s agent-general in London. The former B.C. deputy finance minister will be the company's chief economic and financial adviser.

* * *

New Imperial Mines reports that drill reports from the base metal property at Whitehorse are "most satisfactory" and that seven rigs are operating at four locations. Further contract negotiations are being carried on with Sumitomo Metal Mining of Japan, according to president Arnold Pitt.

* * *

Columbia River Mines reports the first three channel samples taken from drifting gave an average assay of 1.77 ounces of gold or $60 a ton.

* * *

Hurley River Mines reports sample from veins uncovered by trenching assayed 16.37 per cent antimony, 2.2 per cent tungsten, 2.15 ounces silver and gold traces.

Massey-Ferguson Organizes New Canadian Firm

TORONTO — Formation of a new Canadian company, Massey-Ferguson Industries Limited, has been announced by A. A. Thornbrough, president of Massey-Ferguson Limited.

The new company will be responsible for all Massey-Ferguson manufacturing and marketing operations in Canada. All the Canadian operating assets of Massey-Ferguson Limited have been transferred to the new company.

To date, all business in Canada has been transacted in the name of Massey-Ferguson Limited. This, said Mr. Thornbrough, had led to some confusion between the parent company's role of directing and coordinating the world-wide business of the company, and the manufacturing and marketing activities carried out by its North American operations unit. The offices of both are located in Toronto.

Trading Mushrooms

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Vancouver Stock Exchange experienced a turnover of 26,476,859 shares worth a traded value of $23,017,600 during October, compared with 7,154,967 shares with a traded value of $12,099,027 in October 1963.

Last month's transactions bring the 10-month total so far this year to 210,678,591 shares valued at $175,172,021. The total for the comparable period of 1963 was 88,309,498 shares valued at $11,603,308.

Shatto, Coleman Make It

Brown In Running For Linemen's Award

MONTREAL — Either fullback Lovell Coleman of Calgary Stampeders or halfback Dick Shatto of Toronto Argonauts is to be voted the honor of being the outstanding 1964 player in the Canadian Football League.

Results of the second phase in voting for the annual Schenley awards made Coleman the nominee from the Western Conference and Shatto the choice of the Eastern Conference.

Shatto, 32, now a Canadian citizen and an Eastern all-star five times, since joining Argos from University of Kentucky in 1954, holds the all-time CFL record for touchdowns.

A University of Michigan alumnus, the 26-year-old Coleman is in his fifth season with the Stampeders. He averaged 5.9 yeards a carry in his first four seasons and scored a total of 20 touchdowns.

BEST CANADIANS

Halfback Tommy Grant of Hamilton Tiger-Cats and placement kicker Larry Robinson of the Stampeders are the two players left in the running for designation as the outstanding Canadian player of the year.

Robinson, who sees game service other than kicking in the defence backfield, led the WFC in scoring this year. Grant is one of quarterback Bernie Faloney's favorite targets and a dangerous long-yardage threat.

None of the above four has reached the final vote previously but finalists in the voting for lineman of the year are both former winners.

Linebacker Tom Brown of B.C. Lions, winner last year and recently named the outstanding lineman in the WFC for the second season in a row, is challenged by defensive tackle John Barrow of Hamilton. Barrow won the honor in 1962.

SHOOTING FOR TITLE

Only two will be on firing line Friday night but these three are all shooting at same target. Merle Schwandt, coach Dave Price and Oscar Valdal (right) of Victoria High are aiming best shots at city high school soccer championship. Vics meet Oak Bay for title at Royal Athletic Park Friday. Same schools will also clash for second division title in preliminary match, starting at 7.

Stamps' Coleman Leading Rusher

REGINA (CP)—Fullback Lovell Coleman breezed to his second consecutive Western Football Conference rushing title with a total of 1,629 yards on 260 carries.

Statistics released by league statistician Bill Hawrelak has showed Coleman averaged 6.2 yards a carry and scored 10 touchdowns to hold a wide edge over runner-up Ed Buchanan of Saskatchewan Roughriders. Buchanan carried 179 times for 1,390 yards and a 7.8-yard average.

Two other players broke the 1,000-yard mark. Rookie fullback Bob Swift of British Columbia Lions went 1,054 yards on 229 carries for a 4.6 average, while George Reed of Saskatchewan marched 1,012 yards in 185 carries for an average of 5.4 yards.

KAPP UP THERE

Joe Kapp of B.C. and Eagle Day of Calgary shared the quarterback honors. Kapp had the most completions—194 for 2,816 yards—while Day had the best average—62.1 per cent.

Tommy-Joe Coffey of Edmonton Eskimos established a pass receiving record when he pulled in 81 passes for 1,142 yards. Ernie Pitts of Winnipeg set the previous record in 1959 when he collected 1,126 yards.

Ron Morris of B.C. came on late to win the punt laurels. He returned 68 punts for 407 yards while Jim Copeland of Saskatchewan was second with 381 yards.

Neal Beaumont of B.C. was the top punter with 42.1-yard average, and Jack Delveaux of Winnipeg was second with 41.2.

Jim Furlong kicked 125 punts —the most in the conference— and the longest with an 86-yard boot.

Bill Munsey of B.C. intercepted nine passes, the most in the league.

Grey Cup Parade Becoming Racket?

HAMILTON (CP)—Controller Brian Morison of Hamilton accused promoters of the Grey Cup parade Monday to having turned the national celebration into "a racket."

"What was once a national celebration has been turned into a commercial operation by a few people trying to make a dollar at the expense of the taxpayers in participating municipalities," Mr. Morrison said. He made the comment as Hamilton board of control agreed to pay $500 to enter a float and two bands in the Nov. 28 parade at Toronto.

Jack Jones, secretary of the board, said organizers of the parade are asking $250 from out-of-town sponsors for each float or band entering the parade. He said Toronto sponsors are charged $400 for similar privileges.

Because Hamilton's two bands from the police and fire departments were being counted as one, the total entry fee was $500 instead of the normal $750, Jones said.

TEL AVIV, Israel (CP)—Canada led East Germany 1-0 after the first of four matches as the 16th chess Olympiad got under way Tuesday.

ALS TO LOSE $150,000

Seating Cutback Reduces Revenue

MONTREAL (CP) — McGill University announced Tuesday it is cutting by 4,000 seats the capacity of Molson Stadium, home of Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference.

The present capacity is 26,215. Harry Griffiths, McGill's athletics director, said the university will remove end zone seats under the stadium scoreboard to restore track facilities to full capacity for 1965.

The cutback will mean a revenue loss of approximately $150,000 to the Alouettes next season if they keep playing their home games at the stadium. Alouett. owner Ted Workman has announced plans for a new stadium to be opened in time for the 1965 season, but he is said to have run into financial problems.

"Our athletes have been unable to train properly in recent years because of the fact the track has been monopolized by seats," Griffiths said.

The Alouettes have played their home games at the stadium since 1954.

Coast Jockey On Hot Streak

GREENWOOD, Ont. (CP) — Apprentice jockey Wayne Harris of Vancouver is riding like there won't be a tomorrow.

For the second straight day the 17-year-old rode three winners at Greenwood Tuesday and jumped into the lead in the tight jockey's derby with 11 victories.

Harris' success at this six-furlong track could be pinned on his youth. He isn't afraid to ride with a little abandon.

"These turns are a little tighter than those bigger one-milers, but I don't mind riding around them," he said.

HORSES IN BIG RACE ESCAPE FIRE AT LAUREL

LAUREL, Md. (AP)—Fire destroyed a barn at Laurel race course Tuesday night, killing 34 horses and turning other frightened animals loose into the night.

A Laurel spokesman said 55 horses were believed to have been quartered in barn No. 21 where the fire started.

Firemen hosed down adjacent barns, preventing the flames from spreading.

Horses stabled at Laurel for the Washington, D.C., International Nov. 11 were reported safe.

DOBBS CAUTIOUS

Roughies' Miracle Not Yet Forgotten

CALGARY (UPI)—Bobby Dobbs, head coach of the Calgary Stampeders, considers his club slight favorites over the Saskatchewan Roughriders in their two-game semifinal total-point series that opens Saturday in Regina.

"On our record this season we probably will go into the series slight favorites," he said.

Dobb's caution reflects his memory of last season's astounding finish between the two clubs when Bob Shaw's Roughriders overcame a 26-point deficit in the final game of the home and home series to win the right to meet the British Columbia Lions for the conference title.

UNTHINKABLE

This year, however, a repeat loss in the series is unthinkable to the Stampeders fans, coaching staff and players. The main reason for this healthy outlook is, of course, the Stampeders are flushed with success of two key victories against both the Roughriders and Lions.

Calgary is healthy except for split end Bruce Claridge with a broken shoulder. He is expected to be replaced by Ron Payne for the series.

Stampeders' injury returnees for the series include Don Luzzi, who missed part of the 42-0 debacle while recuperating from an ankle injury, and Jim Dillard who played his first game in five weeks last Wednesday.

Day Captures Jump Event

NEW YORK (AP)—Eighteen-year-old Jim Day of Toronto marched off with the first international jumping event of the National Horse Show Tuesday.

Day, an architectural student at the University of Toronto, captured the West Point challenge trophy by the slim margin of one-tenth of a second.

Day, up on Mr. Dunahee, was timed in 38.5 seconds. Dr. Hugo Arrambide of Argentina riding Lanza Brava, was second; Tom Gayford of Canada, handling Mapleleigh, and Rafael Jiminez of Mexico, piloting Halcon, were tied for third.

New Lou Heats Up New York

NEW YORK (AP) — New York, which has had less than its share of hockey heroes in recent years, is warming up to a hot-shot rookie with a lunging-type style who has helped the Rangers get off to an unexpectedly fast start in the National Hockey League race.

He's Lou Angotti, a dark-haired, 26-year-old forward from Toronto.

Because he is of Italian descent, Angotti reminds some of "Leapin's Louie" Fontinanto, a Ranger defence favorite of a few years ago. Only the new Louie is a player with a low-striding skating pattern, that seems to have thoroughly confused the opposition.

The Rangers were picked to finish last in the six-team circuit in most pre-season polls and coach Red Sullivan insists Angotti is among those responsible for the 3-4-3 record which puts his charges only two points out of first place.

PLEASANT SURPRISE

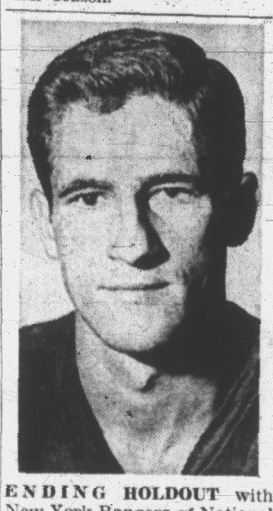
"He's been a most pleasant surprise so far," Sullivan said Monday.

"There are some super-stars in this league like Bobby Hull of Chicago and Frank Mahovlich of Toronto who have all the natural ability in the world" Angotti pointed out. "I have to keep skating and checking to be effective.

"They don't make many mistakes in the NHL, so you sort of have to force them to make mistakes."

So far, Louie has forced opposing forwards and defencemen into numerous errors while scoring three goals himself.

Angotti, obtained from Rochester of the American League last June, didn't turn pro until two years ago because he was taking a bachelor of science degree at Michigan Tech. He played three years of varsity hockey at the Houghton, Mich., school, scoring 29 goals and being named to the first college all-America team in his final season.



ENDING HOLDOUT with New York Rangers of National Hockey League Tuesday was Jean Ratelle, who played briefly with Rangers last season. Ratelle has been sent to New York's farm club at Baltimore to play himself into condition.

Rookie Esposito Fires Winner As Black Hawks Nip Rangers 2-1

CHICAGO (CP)—Three goals and two assists in 27 games may not seem like much. And, frankly speaking, it isn't.

But Chicago Black Hawks weren't overly disappointed with the output of rookie centre Phil Esposito last season. After all, with centres Stan Mikita and Red Hay on the team a third line pivot doesn't get too much ice time.

Esposito, 22-year-old native of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., now is showing that his value to the club has improved.

He triggered the winning goal Tuesday night as Chicago edged New York Rangers 2-1 before a slim gathering of 9,722 Hawks fans in the only game played. The victory moved Chicago into a fourth-place tie with the Blueshirts.

EIGHT FOR HULL

Esposito fired what proved to be the margin of victory 15 seconds after Bobby Hull's eighth goal of the season broke a scoreless duel at 12:31 of the second period. Vic Hadfield scored for the Rangers in the third.

Hull blasted a 20-foot shot through a screen of players to beat Marcel Paille and Esposito quickly followed up, taking the puck with his back to the net and sending Chicago ahead 2-0 with a quick backhander.

Hawks goalie Glenn Hall, who made 32 saves as New York outshot Chicago 33-27, lost his bid for a shutout at 13:14 of the final period when Hadfield fired his third of the year.

GOING GREAT

Esposito now has four points on two goals and two assits, just one point short of his production last season when he was possibly a little awestruck upon reaching the NHL from St. Louis of the Central Pro League.

Although hockey forecasts seldom are correct, "vote projections" were the craze Tuesday night during the U.S. elections and the same principle adapts to hockey. Hull's goal projection, based on almost 13 per cent of the schedule, shows him headed for a record.

With eight goals in nine games, the blond bomber is scoring at a rate that would give him at least 62 goals in a full 70-game schedule. The record is 50 goals in a season.

Soviet Team Will Appear At Trail Rink

TRAIL, B.C. (CP)—Arrangements have now been completed for an exhibition hockey game between Western International League all-stars and the Russian national team here Dec. 23.

The game was announced some time ago but drew protests from the league that the Trail arena is too small and there was no protection against financial losses.

It was suggested that the Russians play in Spokane, Wash., which has a large arena.

However, the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association ruled that all games scheduled for the Canadian tour must be played in Canada and indicated the game might be moved to Victoria or Vancouver.

Totems Trip College

Tuning up for the Inter-High School Basketball League season, Victoria High Totems tripped St. Louis College 51-44 in an exhibition game Tuesday at Vic High.

Trimble Tips Hand To Ottawa

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Jim Trimble has thrown down a challenge to Ottawa Rough Riders by revealing what strategy his Montreal Alouettes will use when the teams meet Saturday in their Eastern Football Conference sudden-death playoff at the capital.

Trimble said he will use only a few offensive plays—the ones that worked best during the season—and will have his backfield in perpetual motion.

"All four of our backs are going to be all over the place, and I don't care if Ottawa knows about it or not," he said Tuesday night. "They're going to have a tough time defending them."

The backs are George Dixon, Nat Craddock, Jerry Fields and Rene Riopelle.

"I've eliminated the plays that didn't work well during the season," he said. "We're taking all our very best offence and putting it in there. So far, in the workouts this week, the theory part of it has been coming real good. The squad is real sharp, real sharp."

LIGHT WORKOUTS

Alouettes are conducting light drills this week as several players are still sporting aches and pains from the final EFC game last Sunday against Hamilton.

Quarterback Vernon Cole, the rangy, unknown Texan who led Als to their startling three-win start this season, was throwing fine passes for distance, working with a second-string unit. A two-way player, he gave way to rookie quarterback George Bork when the Als started their long losing streak.

Bork and his back-up signal caller Jim McKean worked with the four backs Trimble expects to scramble in Ottawa. Trimble said he would probably use these two rookie quarterbacks, benching Cole to make room on the lineup for ace receiver Jack Gotta, back after an injury.

Villemure Returning To Vancouver's Cage

VANCOUVER (CP) — New York Rangers' stand-by goaltender Gilles Villemure will take over the nets for Vancouver Canucks tonight, replacing injured Gilles Boisvert.

The Canucks announced here Tuesday that Villemure, who was with Vancouver two years ago, will join the club in Los Angeles for tonight's game and remain with Canucks for the rest of the season.

Boisvert suffered a severely pulled thigh muscle in training camp and has limped through the first 10 games of the schedule.

Despite the injury, he helped keep Canucks in a second-place tie and has a respectable 2.80 goals per game average, fourth best in the six-team league.

Canucks called Boisvert's injury the best-kept secret of the season.

Boisvert came to Canucks this year from the New York Rangers.

Villemure played here two seasons ago, was regular netminder with the Baltimore Clippers last year and moved up to the Rangers this year. He saw action in two games with the Rangers.

Banff May Get World Ski Offer

CALGARY (CP) — Hans Maceij, who has just returned from an International Olympic Committee meeting in Tokyo, says Banff may be asked to stage the 1966 International Ski Championships.

He told a meeting of the Calgary Olympic Development Association during the weekend that the chairman of the Federation of International Skiers had asked him if Banff would be interested in staging the meet.

Chile has been selected as the host country, Mr. Macij said, but officials say it may not be able to meet the requirements in time.

Site for the event could be re-awarded at a meeting in Europe next May, Mr. Maciej said.

WHITEY FORD'S CAREER . . . . . HINGES ON OPERATION

'I Might Not Be Able to Pitch Again'

NEW YORK (UPI)—Whitey Ford, a guy who never believed in kidding himself, already has faced up to the fact he'll be putting his baseball career squarely on the line in five more days.

The likeable Yankee southpaw will undergo surgery at a Houston, Tex., hospital this coming Monday for an arterial blockage in his left shoulder and upon the success or failure of that operation will depend whether he can ever pitch again.

"I know it's serious and I've faced the thought that I might not be able to pitch again, but it has to be done and I might as well get it over with," said the 36-year-old left-hander.

The statement is typical of Ford.

Unlike many other pitchers, he never has shirked an assignment no matter how difficult it was and the three managers he played under with the Yankees, Casey Stengel, Ralph Houk and Yogi Berra, all agreed he never tried to con them even once.

"When you go out to the mound to take out most pitchers, nine out of every 10 will try to tell you they're all right," Stengel once said. "Not Ford, though. If he doesn't have it anymore, he's the first one to say so. He doesn't give you a lotta' soft soap."

Houk and Berra said exactly the same thing about the stocky, little Yankee ace.

Ford didn't immediately decide to submit to the operation when the doctors at Lenox Hill hospital informed him they felt it was necessary earlier in the week.

"I slept on the decision for one night," he revealed. "Then I decided I'd have it done.

"They tell me that the blood has been shut off completely in the main artery of my left shoulder. I have no idea what could have caused it. They'll have to cut my shoulder, open it up and try to clean out the obstruction.

"I came to the conclusion I'd have this done even if I wasn't an athlete. After all, it's for my own general good."

Ford makes no bones about the fact he'd like to continue pitching. He even gave up his extra job as the Yankees' pitching coach recently because he felt it interfered with his performance on the mound although he still turned in a creditable 17-6 record this year.

"Naturally, I'm hoping the operation will be successful," Whitey declared.

If Ford finds he can no longer make a living pitching after next week's operation, it won't be the end of the world for him. He has saved his money and has some excellent investments.

"Financially, I'm not worried in the least," he pointed out.

"Money never has been my major concern," he added. "I just want to play baseball.

Funny, but those are practically the same words he used when a Yankee scout came to his house to offer him a $150-per-month contract in a class-C league 18 years ago.

Toronto Plans Olympic Centre

TORONTO (CP)—Reeve Norman Goodhead of suburban North York announced Monday that a $17,000,000 Olympic training centre will be built in North York.

The project includes full Olympic facilities for outdoor and indoor athletic activity, a ski and bobsled run and an equestrian circle.

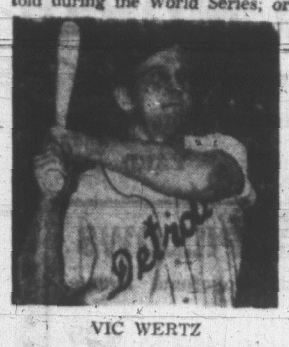
The Wertz Heart Still As Soft As Marshmallow

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—This is a story that should have been told during the World Series, or else kept quiet at least until Christmas.



VIC WERTZ

It is being told now because anytime really is the right time to disclose an unselfish deed and because the man behind that deed, former major leaguer Vic Wertz, would never divulge it even if he had lived to be 100.

Most people remember the 39-year-old ex-outfielder - first baseman as a left-handed, long-ball hitter who spent 20 seasons in American League with the Detroit Tigers, St. Louis Browns, Baltimore Orioles, Cleveland Indians, Boston Red Sox and Minnesota Twins.

They may also recall he was the victim of one of Willie Mays' most fantastic catches during the 1954 World Series and that he suddenly was stricken with polio a year later.

As a ball player, Wertz was always known as a guy with a heart as soft as marshmallow.

He hasn't changed a lick even though he's a businessman now with his own beer and wine distributorship in Mt. Clemens, Mich.

Three Trucks and Barrel of Hope

Wertz went into heavy debt 10 years ago when, while still playing ball, he started the venture with three modest delivery trucks, a franchise and a barrel of hope.

He worked tirelessly building the business to where he now has 16 trucks and employs 25 men.

Vic suddenly hit on an idea to stimulate sales last summer. He decided to conduct a contest among his drivers. Those who showed the biggest percentage of increase in sales over the year would be his personal guests on an all-expenses paid round-trip to the World Series and the World's Fair.

Originally, Wertz planned to take about a dozen of his drivers, but as the summer moved along and the competition among them became so keen, he began to feel all of them deserved to win.

So the soft - hearted one - time slugger finally invited all those who wanted to go. Moreover, he asked them to bring their wives along—as his personal guests.

One problem arose. The wife of one of Vic's employees was anxious to make the trip but felt there was no possible way she could.

'Thank You' All That Was Needed

She couldn't walk at all and had been confined to a wheelchair for nine years because of polio. The wheelchair was so old, the woman was afraid it would break down.

Wertz learned of the crisis and immediately moved into action.

He went out and obtained a brand new wheelchair from the National Foundation of the March of Dimes. Upon seeing it delivered to her home, the startled recipient, an attractive woman in her early 30's, burst into tears.

"I'll never forget you," she told Wertz later. "You've made me the happiest person in the world."

The woman and 27 others made the trip and had the time of their lives between the World Series and the World's Fair.

Shortly before it was time to return home, there was a knock on the door of Wertz' hotel room and a bellboy delivered five dozen long-stemmed roses. A card was attached for Vic and his wife, Lucille.

"Thank you, Mr. and Mrs. Wertz, for a most wonderful trip," the card read. It was signed "The Gang."

That was it, nothing more. Nothing more was really needed.

Casper Connects With Payoff Birdie

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP)—Billy Casper holed a six-foot birdie putt on the third extra hole of an 18-hole playoff match, defeating Pete Brown Tuesday in the $25,000 Almaden open golf tournament.

Casper and Brown went to sudden-death extra holes after finishing even on the 18-hole playoff with four-under-par 68s.

Jerry Steelsmith, third man in the playoff, shot a 73 and dropped out after 18 holes.

Casper received $3,300 first-place money. Brown and Steelsmith split second- and third-place money with $1,900 each.

Courtney Signed To Coach Colts

HOUSTON (AP) — Clint Courtney, an American League catcher for 11 years, signed a contract Tuesday as a coach and bullpen catcher for Houston Colts.

Courtney, 37, has been in the Houston farm system as a player-coach the last three years. He previously was with New York Yankees, St. Louis Browns, Chicago White Sox, Washington Senators and Baltimore Orioles.

$6 MILLION GATE?

Good 'Action' At Box Office For Title Bout

BOSTON (UPI)—Promoters of the Cassius Clay-Sonny Liston fight at Boston Garden Nov. 16 are happily predicting a record gross of up to $6 million from a match already ruled out of order by the World Boxing Association.

Spokesmen for Inter-Continental Promotions, Inc. said Tuesday that their projections already show a gross of close to $5 million but admitted that the $6 million figure was "optimistic."

Inter - Continental president Bob Nilon revealed the $6 million figure here Monday while noting that the potential theatre television phase at 262 locations could run to a maximum of one million customers.

However, the estimate was revised downward Tuesday with the announcement that the one million theatre television seats were potential from a complete sellout at all of the locations.

VERY GOOD

"We hope" publicist Harold Conrad said, "to do 60 per cent of capacity which would be very good. That would be 600,000 tickets at $6 each gross. Of that figure, 55 per cent comes to the promoter.

"We expect to sell out Boston Garden on a $50 top scale for $450,000 there. The other figures are $250,000 from radio rights, $450,000 from European rights, $100,000 from film rights, $100,000 from the community antenna system and $90,000 from a pre-fight show.

NOT ALL NET

"Now, not all of those figures are net. But we anticipate at least a $4.7 million gross. And of the net, 40 per cent goes to the promoter and 30 per cent to each fighter.

"If we reach anywhere near our potential, we'll have the richest fight in history and the two fighters could take down as much as $700,000."

Boston Garden officials already announced that live gate receipts had exceeded $100,000 and said the advance sale was at least a good indication of a possible sellout.

NEED FIGHTERS

In addition to discussing the figures, Inter-Continental officials were making arrangements for a Thursday news conference at the Plymouth, Mass., training camp of challenger Liston.

However, officials feared they would not have a sparring partner left in the Liston camp for the press session after the challenger knocked out two of his training aides during Tuesday's six-round session.

One of the victims was the newest addition to the sparring corps, Art Wright. Liston spokesmen said they were launching a new search for sparring partners and hoped to have one or two healthy for the Thursday session.

MAN OF ACTION

SONNY SILENT TYPE

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP)—Sonny Liston has all the answers—"yes" and "no."

The man training hard to regain the world heavyweight title from Cassius Clay in their rematch Nov. 16, figures he's going to do just that with his fists. He'd rather talk with 'em, too.

A dialogue with the man of few words goes like this:

"Sonny, you're favored for the fight, and. . . ."

"What you want me to do, change that?"

"No, but are you pleased with that position or do you care? Clay says he likes being the underdog."

"Don't care."

"Sonny, you're working much harder this time and seem to be enjoying it. Is that impression a true one?"

"Nope, not enjoying it. Just know what I have to do."

And so it goes with the taciturn tiger, certainly no match for Cassius Clay in the loquacious league.

Footless Gridder Wins Suit

BARRACKVILLE (AP)—Jack Rice, 16, a defensive specialist for the Barrackville high school football team despite two artificial legs, won a $115,000 personal injury suit Monday.

A circuit court jury in Chicago awarded the money to Rice who sued the Gulf, Mobile and Ohio Railroad for the loss of his legs just below the knees seven years ago.

Rice was run over by a freight train near Nilwood, Ill.

The boy's coach, Nathan Crezenzi, says young Rice is used mainly on defence as a linebacker because of his limited mobility.

HUTCHINSON PERKS UP

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Hospital officials said Tuesday that Fred Hutchinson, former Cincinnati Reds manager, had perked up and taken more interest in his surroundings. The 45-year-old Hutchinson is suffering from cancer of the chest. His condition was still listed as serious.

He's a Scrapper by Nature, Profession

TRAIL (CP)—Charles Ghirardosi is a real scrapper.

Besides being by profession a scrap dealer, Mr. Ghirardosi is engaged in a continuing scrap with the provincial government, city council and the B.C. Appeal and Supreme Courts.

In a letter read to council here Monday, Mr. Ghirardosi said he would not move from his seven-acre property in Trail, expropriated by the provincial government for new highway construction.

In the latest of a long series of actions to get more money for the property, Mr. Ghirardosi said "The end does not justify the means."

"To be paid $25,000 for my seven-and-a-half acres of land property, with buildings, in Trail; to suffer damages all these years for loss of business; to pay the cost of moving all that I have thereon; and to be compelled to pay huge costs of legal proceedings in connection with the expropriation thereof, out of the said $25,000 is absolutely unjust," the Ghirardosi letter said.

"To buy a similar property on the same highway where my property is located, with the few dollars left out of that despicable and absurd compensation, is like to exchange $1,000 for a cent, which, as you know, is a very unfair exchange.

"I will remain therefore on my property, regardless of any order to the contrary," the letter said.

OFFERED $27,000

The scrap dealer was originally offered $27,000 for his land by the highways department. He appealed the expropriation offer to the B.C. Supreme Court and lost.

The B.C. Appeal Court later reversed the Supreme Court decision, but ruled that Mr. Ghirardosi be paid only $25,000.

Ald. G. W. Barnsley described the property as "such a disgraceful mess . . . a definite liability to the city and its citizens."

JUST SLUDGE-SLURPING ALONG

YBZ-61 Is A-OK With the RCN

The fleet within a fleet—the "task force" of auxiliary vessels based at HMC Dockyard—has a hard working, dollar saving young member who goes by the somewhat unglamorous name of barge YBZ-61.

She is in effect a huge vacuum cleaner and her job is to vent, clean and gas-free the fuel tanks and bilges of the destroyer escorts and ocean escorts of the RCN's Pacific Command during refit and repair.

YBZ-61 is a welcome addition to the fleet of auxiliary vessels operated by the Queen's Harbor Master because she not only saves time and man hours, thus saving considerable money, but she makes a messy and unpleasant job a lot easier to tackle.

DETERGENT MIX

YBZ-61 accomplishes her job by first steaming out bilges and tanks, then washing them down with hot sea water mixed with a detergent, and sucking out the resultant sludge. Foreign matter such as nuts, bolts and other loose objects are sucked up along with the sludge.

The sludge is carried by armored hose into vacuum tanks on the barge, then drained into settling tanks where the oil and water separate out by gravity.

The water can be further cleaned by putting it through an oily water separator before discharging it overboard.

The remaining oil is sampled, and in most cases, is found to be fit for use in RBZ-61's own boilers to provide steam for her own operations, or for use in other auxiliary craft, thus resulting in still further savings on general oil purchases.

DONE BY HAND

Previously, bilge and tank cleaning was done manually by men armed with buckets and shovels, and all tank interior plates had to be wiped down by hand.

There was also the problem of disposing of the "gunk" removed from tanks and bilges, but because of YBZ-61's unique separators, this problem has been eliminated.

YBZ-61 was built in the yards of Allied Shipyards Ltd., Vancouver, and has been in operation in the dockyard for about one year. Admittedly, she had a few teething troubles, but her crew of five men now have her working smoothly. A sister barge is at work in Halifax at the disposal of ships of the Atlantic Command.

In charge of operations on board YBZ-61 is Len Carr, a Canadian who spent the war years in the Royal Navy. He is assisted by two oilers, Harry Dovey and Ben Williams, and by two firemen, William Rolfe and William Harding.

The job of these five men is to run the barge and her equipment. Operations inside the fuel tanks and bilges of the Pacific Command's ships are carried out by other dockyard workers.

700 TONS

The barge has a displacement of 700 tons. She is 120 feet in length, has a beam of 36 feet and a draught of six feet.

Accommodation on the barge provides for workmen, and includes two bunks, lockers for clean and dirty clothing, table and chairs, refrigerator, hot plate and sink, and showers and wash basins.

Her equipment includes two boilers of 6,000 pounds per hour of steam each, two Diesel generators of 30 KW each, two vacuum pumps of 1,720 cubic feet per minute each, and two sea water heaters, plus associated auxiliaries and equipment.

Dief Presses For Hearing On Trucking

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker asked again in the Commons Tuesday whether the government would establish a committee so the interprovincial trucking industry and other interested groups could make representations in connection with the proposed national labor code.

He previously has asked Labor Minister MacEachen for assurance that the views of the trucking industry, which he says requires special consideration under the code, will be adequately heard. He said the wheat pools also should be given a chance to make their views known.

Mr. MacEachen said earlier that he has held a series of meetings with the trucking industry and he has outlined special consideration which appeared to meet with the industry's approval.

Prime Minister Pearson assured Mr. Diefenbaker that the views of the industry are receiving "very careful consideration indeed."

DRIBS AND DRABS

U.K. Won't Hurry Tariff Reduction

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

When Britain starts cutting its 15 per cent import tariffs, they won't come off all at once but in dribs and drabs in line with periodic appraisal of Britain's economic recovery.

This emphasis on reduction, rather than elimination, may not be too pleasing to the European partners who have accused Britain of breaching international trade agreements.

But then, again, Britain does not acknowledge this breach. Instead, James Callaghan, chancelor of the Exchequer, told London Bankers Tuesday that the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, which sets out the trade rules, is too restrictive and should be changed.

"We cannot be pilloried," he says, "because we have chosen the instrument that will handicap the flow of trade least and is in the best interest of Britain."

WON'T BE PUSHED

Indicating he won't be pushed into any hurried action, Callaghan said the Labor government's aim is to "reduce" the special import tariffs "as our position shows an unmistakable improvement." As for complete elimination of the surcharges, this would be done "as soon as we are confident that we are well and truly set on the road to a permanent improvement in our external position."

The Callaghan statement coupled with the throne speech announced earlier, suggest that with the Labor administration pledged to increase Britain's social welfare program and to extend industrial nationalization there might be a tendency by the new government to remain protective as long as possible.

Britain's gold holdings have declined, dropping by the equivalent of some $300,000,000 during the last 12 months. Exports have stagnated and though a new budget is to be introduced next week to help, in part, to overcome structural deficiencies in the economy, it appeared Britain is in for a long and burdensome trek before it can say it is on its feet again.

EXPORTS SLACK

It may be more significant therefore to judge Britain's actual problem in the light of views by the Earl of Cromer, governor of the Bank of England. He told London bankers Britain may in fact be striving for a standard of living higher than it can actually afford.

And part of the fault, he argues, is not the lack of markets for Britain's exports, but slackness on the part of the exporters in competing for markets and in fulfilling delivery targets.

Even if this should mean delaying deliveries to ready-made customers at home, Britain's exporters must get out and sell abroad.

"Unfortunately," he adds, "one still hears stories of enquiries from abroad meeting either such dilatoriness in handling or such extended delivery dates that foreign buyers meet their needs in other markets with a mere fraction of the delay."

HABITUAL CHARGE DROPPED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Crown has dropped habitual criminal proceedings against 37-year-old Maureen Gilbert, whose health was reported to be deteriorating as she awaited trial.

Prosecutor Stewart McMorran entered a stay of proceedings after he was told by an Oakalla Prison Farm doctor that the woman is suffering from acute anxiety and depression and any further delay would aggravate the problem.

The case was delayed while Mr. McMorran awaited a Supreme Court judgment on whether magistrates' courts have the right to hear habitual criminal cases.

The woman is now serving a two-year term imposed in April for narcotics possession.

NARCOTICS NETS PAIR JAIL TERMS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver men arrested with $15,000 worth of narcotics in their possession were sentenced Tuesday to four- and seven-year jail terms for trafficking.

Magistrate Bernard Isman sentenced Stewart Jacobs, 48, to seven years and John Campbell, 36, to four years. Both had pleaded not guilty.

Police said the pair were arrested Sept. 9 with 1,000 capsules of narcotics in their possession.

Banks' Aide Pleads Guilty To Conspiracy

MONTREAL (CP)—An aide of deposed maritime union head Hal Banks pleaded guilty Tuesday to conspiracy to assault charges and was held for sentence Friday.

The surprise plea was entered on behalf of Eldon (Jack) Richardson, 38, accused with others of conspiring to beat up Capt. Henry Walsh in Owen Sound, Ont., in 1957.

Richardson was a lieutenant of Banks, former head of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.), who jumped his $25,000 bail pending an unsuccessful appeal of a five-year prison term on the same conspiracy charge.

BAIL CANCELLED

Richardson has been in jail here since the cancellation of his $2,000 bail Oct. 5. In changing the plea, defence lawyers referred to the case of co-accused Paul Carsh who recently received a one - year sentence after pleading guilty.

The maximum penalty is 14 years in prison, but the defence sought only an additional 10 months in jail arguing Richardson was less implicated than Carsh.

Judge Emile Trottier set sentence for Friday, saying he wished to examine the matter carefully and present a written report on the sentence.

Seat Fund Gets Boost; Now $2,000

The McPherson Playhouse seat fund has surged to $2,000, manager Robert Ellison reported today.

With a growing number of leading citizens chipping in $10 donations, the endowment fund appears headed for its $9,000 target.

Companies also are beginning to follow the lead of university students and service club members who made the early group donations, endowing a block of a dozen seats for $120.

The fund will provide plush refurbishing for the theatre seats in the civic playhouse in keeping with the stylized period interior.

BRASS PLATE

Individuals donating will be recognized with a small brass plate that will be attached to one of the seats. Group donations will be acknowledged with a brass plaque in the lobby.

"Some of the latest names include Rear Admiral J. C. Hibbard, Sir Robert Holland, Lady Maze, the Wynne Shaw Dance Studio, the Fine Arts Group of the University Women's Club and the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association," Mr. Ellison said.

"Our corporate gifts have been slow in getting started but they have recently been given a boost with the contributions of King Brothers, Ker and Stephenson Ltd., M. P. Paine and Co., G. H. Weaton Ltd., and Camosun Electric Co. (1936) Ltd."

Donations can be sent to City Hall's comptroller-treasurer James Bramley or Mr. Ellison.

Canada May Deport Dominican

OTTAWA (CP)—Immigration Minister Tremblay said Tuesday he is reconsidering a deportation order against the wife of former Dominican secret police chief A. R. Espaillat.

He told the Commons in reply to Alvin Hamilton (PC-Qu'Appelle) that Mrs. Espaillat remained in Canada with her three children after the deportation of her husband, who headed the secret police of assassinated dictator Rafael Trujillo.

She had been granted a visa by the government of Portugal and a deportation order was issued against her because the visa expired Nov. 1.

However, he said, he has learned that Portugal is willing to extend the visa to next spring to permit the three Espaillat children to complete their school year in Ottawa.

32 SCOUTS DECORATED BY VANIER

OTTAWA (CP)—Governor-General Vanier, as Chief Scout of Canada, decorated 32 members of the Canadian boy scout movement Tuesday for bravery, meritorious conduct or service to scouting in an investiture at Government House.

Troop leader Harvey Hutchings, 18, of Cloverdale, B.C., received the Cornwell scout badge for achieving the grade of Queen's Scout despite illness, operations and severe pain.

Cub Jerry Tetz, 10, of Trochu, Alta., was honored with the Bronze Cross for bravery in saving two children from his burning family home. Two further attempts to enter the house to save his baby brother failed when the ceiling collapsed.

Vote to Decide On Source Of Indian Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — Citizenship Minister Tremblay said Monday each Indian band in Canada will vote to determine the wishes of band members on proposals to extend provincial government services to them.

He told the Commons that those bands which express a desire not to avail themselves of provincial services will continue to receive service from the federal government.

Mr. Tremblay was outlining the "consultation" procedure at the request of Opposition Leader Diefenbaker who questioned him about a two-day conference of federal and provincial authorities last week.

Mr. Tremblay explained that the kind of services involved include education, social welfare programs and community development projects.

LOCAL PARLEYS

He said the conference agreed that an Indian conference will be held in each province to which all Indians would be invited. There they could express their desires and opinions on extension of provincial services.

If it became evident from this conference that Indians generally want such a step taken there then would be consultation with each band and band council to see whether the band wanted to take advantage of particular programs.

Mr. Tremblay said that a permanent Indian committee will be set up for consultation on administrative matters involved in proposed extensions of services.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) asked what the federal government's view was with regard to incorporating Indian reservations within school districts so that the land could be taxed.

Mr. Tremblay replied that no decision was taken on this idea. He said the constitution excludes Indian reservation property from such taxation and this provision cannot be abolished. Non-reservation property sometimes could be taxed municipally.

China Visit Difficult, Says Sharp

OTTAWA (CP)—Trade Minister Sharp said Tuesday lack of Canadian recognition of Communist China makes it necessary for him to consider very carefully whether he could make a personal sales visit to China.

Alvin Hamilton (PC - Qu'Appelle) noted that a member of the United Kingdom government has visited China to discuss trade, and asked whether Mr. Sharp would consider doing the same thing.

Mr. Sharp said he was under the same disability Mr. Hamilton was when he was minister of agriculture in the former Conservative government.

Lack of recognition doesn't necessarily rule out a visit by a cabinet minister to China, but it does raise diplomatic questions which would have to be very carefully considered. Mr. Sharp said he had discussed this with External Affairs Minister Martin.

Seat Will Be Ruled Vacant

REGINA (CP)—The provincial constituency of Hanley will be declared vacant as a result of a decision Tuesday by Mr. Justice Stewart McKercher of Court of Queen's Bench.

Mr. Justice McKercher accepted a legal admission by former CCF attorney-general R. A. Walker, MLA for Hanley, that he was "unduly returned" as member for Hanley because there were irregularities in procedu in the constituency in the April 22 provincial election.

Will Four Provinces Ever Gang Up to Attack Federal Power?

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

OTTAWA—Canada must soon face the largest constitutional decision in its history as an independent state. Not since the British North America Act was proclaimed in 1867 have the nation's eleven sovereign governments undertaken any revision of their joint affairs comparable to the project now under way.

Yet it is abundantly clear that most federal and provincial politicians do not begin to understand the new formula by which the constitution can be moved from Britain to Canada.

Misunderstanding, or misrepresentation, has reached a dizzy climax when the Conservative party in Parliament condemns the policy invented by the former Conservative government. For in all essentials the present formula is the work of Mr. Davie Fulton who, as minister of justice, represented Prime Minister Diefenbaker and acted under his instruction.

The infanticide which the official opposition now attempts to practise on its own brain children is an interesting study in abnormal psychology. It has split the Conservative party down the middle, with Mr. Fulton and three influential Conservative premiers repudiating Mr. Diefenbaker's position. But this family quarrel has only a passing importance. The vital question is whether the new formula contains seeds of future trouble for the whole nation.

That question is obscured for the moment not only by the Conservatives' internal schism but by a general misconception of the eleven governments' attitude.

Quebec Accepted

It is commonly said, for example, that the proposed all-Canadian constitution was written to appease the nationalism of Quebec. This happens to be false. Certainly Quebec's wishes were consulted and in some respects granted but in the only controversial area Quebec failed to get what it wanted and accepted the views of the other nine provinces with extreme reluctance.

As judged by the 11 participating governments, the final result was an unprecedented success for national unity. After half a century of futile argument, all of them embraced the so-called Fulton Formula, refined in only minor detail by Mr. Pearson.

This success, however gratifying it may be for the present, is no answer to the central question: Does the proposed constitution threaten, at some future date, to erode the indispensable powers of the national government?

Single Section

The threat is confined, for all practical purposes, to a single section of the new formula.

By delegating its jurisdiction to a group of any four provinces the central government and Parliament could gradually emasculate themselves, in theory at least.

Theoretically there is no doubt whatever about that. National authority could be eroded in such areas as taxation, monetary policy, interprovincial commerce and foreign trade, all of them essential to the government of any nation.

Any 4 Provinces

Disintegration from the centre would be assured if any four provinces demanded the right to trespass on these or other fields of federal jurisdiction and Parliament agreed to surrender them. Thus in theory at any rate four provinces could conduct their own monetary policies, restrict federal taxation, interfere with the movement of goods across the land and manage foreign trade by erecting their own tariffs. In confident negative. They hold this chaos the nation, as a nation, would disappear.

How serious is that 'danger'? Some eminent constitutional lawyers regard it as very serious and much more will be heard from them before the great debate is finished. The federal and all the provincial governments regard the danger as imaginary and quite ridiculous.

Practical Safeguard

It is more likely, they say, that the provinces, or some of them, will transfer provincial power to Ottawa than the reverse. Moreover, they add, it is unlikely, almost inconceivable, that four provinces will ever gang up to make a joint assault on federal power.

Mr. Pearson insisted on the four-province arrangement, as a practical safeguard, when Quebec proposed at first that a single province (which meant Quebec) should have the right to invade federal jurisdiction, if Parliament agreed. Finally Quebec accepted Mr. Pearson's compromise with deepest misgivings.

In his opinion it is absurd to suppose that the present federal government or any successor would abandon its paramount power to levy taxes of any sort, manage the money supply, control commercial banking, fix tariffs, appoint judges, amend the Criminal Code and conduct foreign policy. Even if a future federal government were weak enough to dilute itself in this fashion, is it conceivable that a future Parliament would ratify an act of federal suicide?

For the current 11 governments the answer is a flat and confident negative. They hold that the erosion of necessary federal power is a bogeyman invented by constitutional theorists or partisan politicians on the make.

Too Pat, Too Easy

Their answer is too pat and too easy. For constitutions are not made to protect nations from trustworthy governments and legislatures. They are made, in fact, to guard against erratic behavior and unforeseen events. If all governments and legislatures were wise and trustworthy, if all events could be foreseen, there would be no need for constitutions at all.

Besides, if no group of four provinces would ever think of combining to coerce a weak central authority in imperative areas of federal jurisdiction, why not write that assurance into the constitution?

Why not provide in the new formula that these few areas (not more than half a dozen at most) are immune to amendment without at least the approval of a decisive national majority, say two-thirds of the provinces containing more than half the population? Why, in short, should some basic provincial rights, like the French language in Quebec, be protected from any change without the consent of all provinces while basic federal rights are left subject to bargaining?

No Objection

The present federal government has no objection to a protective device of that kind, even though it is considered unnecessary in practical politics. But the government argues that the new formula was achieved only by something like a miracle, against Quebec's reluctance, and that the miracle would have been impossible if Ottawa had insisted on reserving some of its powers from delegation to the provinces.

In any case, the government argues, a deal was made, a contract signed, and if it is now re-opened it may well collapse. The provinces, especially Quebec, may have second thoughts and reject the whole arrangement.

Then the constitution would not be repatriated. Worse, the British Parliament might refuse later on to amend it automatically at Canada's request and leave the nation in a constitutional vacuum. If this seems to be an empty threat, the Canadian government has noted that Prime Minister Wilson of Britain, as former opposition leader, once protested vigorously against the existing fiction by which the British Parliament formally controls another state's basic law.

Tight Schedule

Hence the Canadian government, rightly or wrongly, feels that it is operating on a tight timetable, that the constitution must be repatriated now or the chance of agreement between eleven governments may be lost for many years to come.

Whether those fears are realistic or not, the new formula cannot be ratified for many months at earliest. It must first have the approval of 10 provincial legislatures, most of them meeting next spring. Later it must be submitted to Parliament for full examination and quite possibly a federal election will intervene before then to delay action still further. No final conclusion need be expected before next summer or, more likely, next autumn.

Year to Consider

Canada thus has the better part of a year anyway to consider the irrevocable decision posed by the new formula. That period of public education doubtless will be used by some politicians to confuse the whole issue if they can but it will give the people the chance to realize what they are actually deciding, what risks they are taking.

In a word, though the details are infinitely complicated, the people must decide whether any future federal government and Parliament can be trusted to resist the pressures of four provinces for powers that they should never possess. Before that decision is made every danger of federal surrender, years and generations ahead, should be carefully pondered and every possible safeguard explored. In this complex game we are playing for keeps.

PENTICTON HOTEL MAN TOPS PNW

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Drossos of the Three Gables Hotel in Penticton was chosen "hotelman-of-the-year" Tuesday by a poll of the Northwest Travellers' Association during the B.C. Hotel Association convention here.

A young Penticton student, James W. Leigh, was one of six recipients of $250 scholarships awarded by the BCHA.

Other scholarship winners were Kathryn Bechtold of Armstrong, Robert D. Diebolt of Vernon, Faye Hack of McBride, Terence O'Shea of Chemainus and Henry Wrinch of Vancouver.

Picture in Mirror Smiling Back At Appeal Leaders

By TERRY IZZARD

United Appeal directors took a long, hard look in the mirror this week . . . and liked what they saw.

Staring them in the face was the hopeful picture of a successful campaign.

If present estimates are right it could mean the end of seven years' bad luck for Victoria.

The bad luck has dogged them since the mirror first cracked in 1957.

In that year the campaign failed by $31,000.

And it has been falling behind every year since.

Only exception was 1961-62 when the target was dropped to $320,000 and left the Appeal with its head above water to the extent of $8,000.

The '62 campaign (for 1963) fell short by $9,000. Last year the loss was doubled.

Only a week ago the picture was pretty grim, with over $100,000 to go and the campaign due to end Oct. 31.

But now the books will not close for 1965 until the last cent has been handed in.

★ ★ ★

And the cents are still rolling in at a steady rate.

Already the extra lease on life is paying off and less than a quarter of the funds are outstanding.

On a percentage basis donations are ahead of last year. Already over 80 per cent of funds have been turned in. In 1963 the fund still stood at 76 per cent on Nov. 7.

And several major divisions which didn't get their campaigns under way until late will have large sums to chip in.

★ ★ ★

Said Appeal chairman Don Lawson today: "In the course of the next few days, additional information will be received which will make possible a more reasonable estimate of the campaign's final outcome."

"The committee believes that with a return to normal levels of giving in the remainder of the residential canvass and a continuation of present levels in the other divisions, there is every reason to expect over-all success."

Could this mean their luck has changed?

Appeal directors, canvassers and the 24 organizations which benefit certainly hope so.

And they'll need all the luck they can get.

What If Winner Dies?

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The gap of nearly three months between the time the people vote for president and the inauguration always raises the question of what would happen if a winner died before taking office.

This never has happened. And while the constitution goes into some detail on the mechanism of electing a president, it covers only in part the procedure if a winning candidate dies.

It appears that the answer depends upon when death occurred.

If he died after the election but before the electoral college met — Dec. 14 this year — the electors would be free to cast their ballots as they saw fit. There is nothing that would require them to cast presidential votes for the candidate who ran for vice-president on the winning ticket.

Horace Greeley, unsuccessful candidate against President U. S. Grant in 1872, died Nov. 29 after the election but before the electors met. Greeley's 66 electors, acting as free agents, split their votes among four men, giving Greeley's running mate only 18 votes.

If the winner died after the electoral vote had been cast but before he was inaugurated, the vice-president-elect would be sworn in as president. The vice-presidency presumably would stay vacant until the next election, with the Speaker of the House next in line for the presidency.

Big Cable Project

KARACHI (AP) — Japanese telecommunication experts have completed a survey for the laying of 3,000 nautical miles of high-capacity telephone cable under the Arabian Sea, the Indian Ocean and the Bay of Bengal to link Karachi in West Pakistan with Chittagong in East Pakistan. East and West Pakistan are separated by 1,500 miles of Indian territory and the present radio telephone system is not working satisfactorily.

Swindler Working On Prairies

PRINCE ALBERT (CP)—Police have warned residents in Prince Albert and Saskatoon to be on guard against an operation designed to swindle them out of their savings.

Police said an individual telephones account-holders, saying he is manager of the bank and would like assistance in catching a dishonest employee. He then asks that the person withdraw his money from the bank.

If the account-holder cooperates, a second call is made and he is told the employee has been caught and the manager will personally pick up the money to re-deposit it in the customer's account. A man comes and gets the money, and disappears with it.

Police said several Saskatoon residents were victimized by the scheme and one attempt was made Friday in Prince Albert.

FAIR HOUSING LAW REPEALED

LBJ Swept California But Pierre Fell Short

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—President Johnson won California's 40 electoral votes in a smashing victory over Sen. Barry Goldwater, but Republican George Murphy was elected to the U.S. Senate, upsetting the President's former press aide.

A record 7,000,000 California voters also approved an initiative measure erasing state and local laws which ban discrimination in housing. The measure passed despite opposition of many political leaders, church groups and labor unions.

Pierre Salinger, appointed to the U.S. Senate three months ago to fill the vacancy created by the death of a fellow democrat Claire Engle, fell before a wave of ticket-splitting.

Johnson led in California by more than 1,000,000 votes.

FIRST BID

Murphy, former Hollywood actor making his first bid for political office, led Salinger by 150,000.

Goldwater, whose hopes of strong support in populous southern California never materialized, trailed from the first returns.

Johnson put California in the democratic presidential column for the first time since 1948, when Harry S. Truman carried the state by 18,000 votes.

Democrats, boasting their largest registration edge in 14 years, outnumbered republicans by 1,500,000.

The state constitutional amendment that wipes out California's present fair housing law and forbids any further legislation on the subject held a firm three to two margin in mounting returns.

It gives property owners the absolute right to accept or reject any buyers or renters.

REFUSE GAMBLING

Proposals to legalize gambling were slapped down by voters in three states—California, Arkansas and Washington.

California voters in a busy day also approved a proposal to outlaw pay television and repealed a state law requiring railways to fill certain jobs on trains.

The railway train crew issue in California and other states is the centre of a bitter dispute between management, seeking to slash manpower, and unions trying to preserve jobs.

North Dakota and Arizona also repealed train crew laws.

NO SECRETS AMONG TEXANS

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) —Secret ballot, you say?

While President Johnson voted here Tuesday six reporters were peering over his shoulder.

They confirmed the President's remark that he had marked his ballot "Democratic all the way."

Lady Bird voted the straight ticket too, the reporters said.

There were no curtained voting booths. In fact, all voters were subject to such close scrutiny by neighbors who happened along that it seemed apparent the setup was in violation of Texas laws designed to safeguard ballot secrecy.

LBJ SWEEPS WASH.

Rosellini Fails To Ride Wave

SEATTLE (AP) — President Lyndon B. Johnson rode to a crushing victory Wednesday in Washington State, taking 35 of the 39 counties.

The landslide carried four Democratic newcomers to victory but failed to sweep incumbent governor Albert Rosellini back into office.

Johnson is the first Democratic president to gain the state's nine electoral votes since Harry S. Truman in 1948 and the margin was the greatest since the Franklin D. Roosevelt landslide in 1936.

Democratic Senator Henry M. Jackson was swept back into office, defeating Republican challenger Lloyd J. Andrews by almost three votes to one.

The victories gave the Democrats five of the state's seven representative seats in Washington, D.C.

Rosellini was defeated by Daniel J. Evans, a young Seattle engineer who served in the state house of representatives during the governor's eight years in office.

Voters ended Rosellini's eight-year tenure, holding to an historic state tradition that no governor has won three consecutive terms.

President Johnson topped Senator Barry Goldwater by more than 230,000 popular votes, doing well in middle and low income class ballots and winning 94 per cent of the Negro vote.

Goldwater polled mainly the less populous high-income brackets.

The state rejected a controversial gambling tolerance measure on the ballot that would have allowed local governments to licence punchboards, card games and pinball machines.

The referendum had been praised as a spur to the economy and condemned as an invitation to gambling syndicates.

The issue cut severely across party lines and stirred the most interest of any measure on the ballot, getting a push in—the waning days of the campaign.

Crisis Within NATO, Asia May Force Revised Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The election behind him, President Johnson is to plunge into a global review of U.S. foreign policy in the next few days.

The war in South Viet Nam and a dangerous and growing crisis in the Atlantic Alliance are his first concerns.

This policy review could reshape the pattern of U.S. relations with the European allies, according to present thinking of administration policy makers, because of the disarray in NATO. It may also bring about a revision of Johnson's plans to make a start on foreign travels and personal, summit-level diplomacy in the immediate future.

The president is scheduled to meet here in a month or six weeks with the new British prime minister, Harold Wilson. Meanwhile, some consideration is being given to his sending a special emissary abroad to take a first-hand look at European developments.

Johnson's triumph at the polls Tuesday was interpreted by administration officials as a mandate to carry on the main lines of established, bipartisan policy, including efforts to improve relations with Russia and reduce the risks of nuclear war.

DEEPLY CONCERNED

The president is said to be deeply concerned about taking practical steps quickly to rebuild Western unity as far as that may be possible. But there is little hope here that French President de Gaulle, whom officials regard as the central figure in the present turmoil over Western Europe's future, can be persuaded to co-operate.

France now is actively fighting the U.S. plan to form a NATO seaborn nuclear force, which West Germany strongly supports.

The war in South Viet Nam is a source of concern in the administration for two reasons. One is the desire to find new ways, if any exist, of moving toward the successful conclusion which would establish peace and security in Southeast Asia against Communist subversion.

The other is a belief that North Viet Nam and Communist China may be near some major decisions themselves on whether to intensify their efforts to drive the United States out and take over the area.

Perhaps the most serious short-range problem coming up for study by Johnson is whether measures can be devised to offer greater assurance of protection to such countries as India and Japan against the time when Communist China will actually possess nuclear weapons and the means to deliver them on distant targets.

Southerners Face Dilemma; Who Do They Turn To Now?

By JULES LOH

WASHINGTON (AP)—Analysis of Senator Barry Goldwater's sweep of the five southern states in the U.S. election offered little evidence today that a meaningful two-party system now exists in the Deep South.

Four of the five were the same ones which abandoned their Democratic traditions in 1948 under the States Rights party banner, and for the same basic reason: Opposition to civil rights.

In both cases the bolt was essentially from a political party rather than toward one.

The Southerners' dilemma now is:

1. Will the Republican party, which faces a long winter of readjustment after Republican candidate Goldwater's crushing defeat by President Johnson, accept them?
2. If not, will the vote-rich Democratic party take them back?

This time Georgia joined in the defection with the original four — Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and South Carolina—and surely it is the Georgia's victory which Goldwater savors most.

GEORGIA SWITCHES

Until Tuesday's election, Georgia was the only state in the U.S. which had never deserted the Democratic party.

There, where Negroes are represented in the state legislature and make up 23 per cent of the registered voters, the racial issue was only one of several. There was, primarily, the broad contest between liberalism and conservatism. Georgia, especially its old south agricultural areas where Goldwater gained much of his support, traditionally has been recognized as much for its conservatism as for its peaches.

An analysis of the Southern vote shows that Negroes threw more than 91 per cent of their support to the once - despised Democrats, and whites in the rural areas joined the newcomers to the urban south who voted Republican.

President Johnson ran well ahead of Goldwater in Atlanta but behind in the rest of Georgia. In 1960 the late president Kennedy split with Richard M. Nixon in Atlanta but Kennedy got 70 per cent of the rest of the vote.

DEFECTION COMPLETE

In Alabama and Mississippi, where state political machinery was turned over to Goldwater forces, the Democratic defection was virtually complete. Alabama voters elected Republicans, Goldwater supporters all, in five of six U.S. congressional races, in three cases defeated Democratic incumbents.

In Mississippi Republican Prentiss Walker, a one - time Democrat, won that state's only congressional contest, defeating incumbent William A. Winstead. In Georgia, Howard H. Callaway became the first Republican congressman in 90 years, though Democrats won the other five congressional contests. In Florida two Republicans, both incumbents, won re-election.

In the other six states of the old Confederacy — Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Arkansas, Florida and Texas—voters lined up more solidly Democratic than many had been in years.

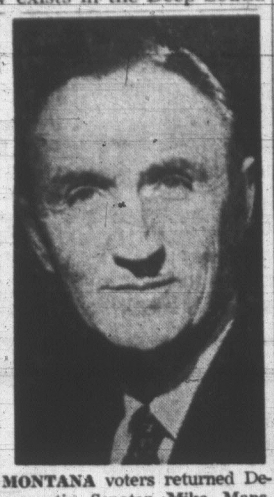
Tennessee, Florida and Virginia had gone Republican the three previous presidential elections and Texas joined them in 1952 and 1956.

This time President Johnson led such an onrush of Democratic power that Kentucky, for example, in the Republican column the last two elections, gave Johnson the greatest margin in the state's history.

In the South's few pockets of traditional Republicanism, Goldwater failed to match Nixon's 1960 support.

If evidence of a viable two-party system was lacking in the South generally, there was at least one historic breakthrough.

Four Negroes in Macon County, Ala., which has a Negro voting majority, were elected to county offices. Three other Negroes, running as independents, were defeated by white opponents.



MONTANA voters returned Democratic Senator Mike Mansfield to a third term Tuesday and gave the state's four electoral votes to President Johnson. Mansfield was leading his Republican opponent, Alex Blewett, by a big margin in early returns.

FIGHT LOOMS

GOP Moderates Flex Muscles To Get Control

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican moderates flexed their muscles today in anticipation of a battle to wrest control of the party from defeated Barry Goldwater and his fellow Conservatives.

Whether Goldwater will choose to fight despite his crushing defeat by President Johnson in Tuesday's U.S. presidential election remained a question only he could answer. He wasn't saying immediately.

But Denison Kitchel, who guided the Arizona senator's campaign, seemed to be serving notice that the men Goldwater placed in positions of party power have no intention of surrendering them voluntarily.

At a press conference in Phoenix, Ariz., Kitchel said:

"It doesn't look like we're going to win this first round. We have to wait for four years but we're going to get this government back where it belongs."

Some moderates countered this with a demand for rebuilding of a party whose candidate carried only five southern states —and possibly his native Arizona.

'RE-ORIENT PARTY'

Henry Cabot Lodge, the 1960 Republican vice - presidential nominee who opposed Goldwater's nomination, said in Beverly, Mass., that the Republicans are going to have to re-orient their party to offer "positive solutions to the nation's problems." In obvious reference to Goldwater's vote against the Civil Rights Act, he added:

"The election shows that the voters want all Americans to receive equal treatment, regardless of race or color."

In Oregon, which Johnson swept into his camp, Governor Mark O. Hatfield said that moderates must become the catalysts in rebuilding the party.

"You can't reorganize or rebuilt the party on left - angle turns," he said.

In New York, Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller, who fought against Goldwater's nomination, said Senator Kenneth B. Keating had been carried down to defeat "by a rolling landslide against the Republican party." Democrats won control of both houses of the state legislature after being in the minority for three decades.

"Republicans have a great record of representing the state," Rockefeller said. "We're going to start this morning working on that record and rebuilding."

MILLER FAILS TO CARRY OWN COUNTY

LOCKPORT, N.Y. (AP)—U.S. Representative William E. Miller, Republican vice-presidential candidate, failed by 38,000 votes to carry his home county in Tuesday's election.

Miller and Arizona Senator Barry Goldwater, the party's presidential candidate, lost Niagara County to the Johnson-Humphrey ticket, 66,004 to 27,998. Miller represented the county, on the Canadian border, in Congress for 14 years.

SOME BEAT ODDS

New Hero List For Republicans

WASHINGTON (AP)—In the wake of Senator Barry Goldwater's stunning defeat, the battered ranks of Republicans yielded a new set of heroes today.

Each walked his own careful election -campaign path and each won a personal victory against great odds in Tuesday's voting.

From their ranks could come the Republican presidential nominee for 1968.

In Michigan, Governor George Romney bucked the Democratic tide to win another term. He had accepted his party's choice of Goldwater as presidential candidate, but withheld endorsement.

In California, former Hollywood movie actor and dancer George Murphy stepped lightly over Pierre Salinger, former presidential press secretary, to win a U.S. Senate seat. (Murphy backed Goldwater but reserved the right to differ with him on such issues as civil rights and once refused to be photographed with Goldwater.)

By contrast, the Republican fallen included some notable Goldwater supporters.

GOLDWATER NO HELP

In Illinois, Charles H. Percy, a young Republican and considered a shining light in the party, failed in a bid for the governorship against incumbent Democrat Otto Kerner. (Percy said he had made 85 speeches for Goldwater's candidacy.)

Even in Goldwater's home state, Arizona, Republican Richard Kleindienst, strong Goldwater supporter and friend, failed in his bid for the governorship, beaten by Democrat Sam Goddard.

In Maryland, incumbent Senator J. Glenn Beall had put off Goldwater endorsement — but late in the campaign, on a Goldwater visit to Maryland, the Arizonan warmly endorsed Beall, and Beall reciprocated. Beall lost his Senate seat to the bid of Joseph Tydings.

Even Republicans lukewarm to Goldwater or opposed to him had to face the anti-Goldwater, pro-Johnson tide.

In New York, veteran Senator Kenneth B. Keating who refused to support Goldwater, failed before the challenge of Robert F. Kennedy, brother of the late president.

The inventory of fallen Republicans grew longer in the congressional side.

On the opposite side of the ledger, in the deep South where Goldwater won his only major victories, his name worked a kind of magic that made U.S. political history.

In Alabama five Democrats fell to Republican challengers for seats in Congress. In eastern Georgia, another Democrat fell. There was still another Democratic upset — in Mississippi. In all but the Mississippi victory, the Republicans were strongly announced for Goldwater.

RE-ELECTED to the governorship of Texas was Democrat John B. Connally, 47. He was severely wounded while riding in the car in which President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas.

Few Changes Likely In Johnson Cabinet

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson may make a few changes in his cabinet, but he is expected to keep intact most of the top-level team he inherited from the late president John F. Kennedy.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon are virtually certain to stay.

Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall, Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman and commerce Secretary Luther H. Hodges also are good bets to continue in office.

Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz could remain where he is, or he might be shifted to attorney-general, a post vacated when Robert F. Kennedy resigned in August to run for the Senate in New York.

(Other possibilities for attorney-general include Nicholas de B. Katzenbach, who is now acting attorney-general; Abe Fortas, a Washington attorney and former assistant secretary of interior who is one of Johnson's most trusted confidantes; and Leon Jaworski, a Houston, Tex., attorney whom Johnson admires.

Johnson has made no bones about his desire to keep Rusk, McNamara and Dillon in the three top cabinet jobs. He holds all three in high esteem.

BRAINTRUST BLAMED FOR SLAUGHTER

Barry 'Dug Grave, Then Sealed It'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator Barry Goldwater dug his political grave before he ever formally got into the presidential race. After that he sealed it.

Before saying he was a candidate—perhaps when he never dreamed of being one — in speeches and books he expressed views completely out of the mainstream of American life for the last 30 years.

Once in the race he became vague, hedged on some of his unpopular previous statements and used up an extraordinary amount of his time insisting he was not irresponsible.

It seems incredible that a presidential candidate would feel it necessary to protest he was not "trigger-happy." But he admitted that this charge against him by Democrats was one of his worst handicaps.

MUST CONSIDER VIEWS

Thus, in the slaughter inflicted on him in Tuesday's election by President Johnson, the voters who repudiated him in such overwhelming numbers that Goldwater had to consider two things above all: His views and his judgment.

For a man who proposed to change the long-accepted view of American government—a big one, with broad responsibility for the general welfare—he put on an unimaginative performance. He proposed almost nothing concrete.

His own hand-picked men who ran the party and the campaign for him—his braintrust—must share responsibility for the inadequacies of his performance.

He and they were the constant critics of things as they are but were almost totally lacking on the constructive side in the sense of offering specific solutions for what they said ailed the country.

What they seemed to have in mind, judging from the little they made clear in the campaign and from what Goldwater said before he became a candidate, was this: A much-diminished central government and the elimination of many programs, particularly many social welfare programs.

After his shattering defeat, Goldwater cannot hope for another try at the White House.

Of far more importance now to the future of the two-party system in American politics and perhaps to the future of the U.S., is what happens to the Republican organization in the four years before the next election.

Conservative Goldwaterites have control of the party machinery. Will the moderate and liberal Republicans, shunted aside this year, let them keep control?

One prediction seems accurate: An intense fight for control of the party is coming.

THE HOVERCRAFT

Is It Really An Aircraft?

They know what it is and what it does, but transport department officials are puzzled as to how they should classify the Hovercraft.

The Air Transport Association of Canada was told today lawyers for the department feel the vehicle should be classified as an aircraft—but that may produce more problems than it solves.

A. S. McDonald, senior adviser to the Air Transport Board, said there'll be "no perfect solution."

SOON IMMEDIATE

Mr. McDonald, member of a panel at the association's annual convention, said the problem will soon be an immediate one — a Montreal firm has already ordered one of the craft for use along the St. Lawrence River and in the Arctic.

"I disagree with the lawyers. I don't think it's an aircraft at all.

"And the United States still hasn't decided. What will happen when one of them crosses the border I don't know."

The craft, employing the jet-propulsion principle, skims along a cushion of air a few feet over either land or water.

Mr. McDonald said traffic rules for the Hovercraft will undoubtedly involve overlapping marine and air regulations. The device might even be considered a ground vehicle at times.

WAIVERS

M. M. Fleming, chief of the transport department's flight standards and regulations division, predicted the first Hovercraft will operate under a flight certificate "covered with waivers."

Replying to a question from the floor, he said Hovercraft that enter competition with normal aircraft will have to file a tariff with the department.

K. M. Pack, director of administration for the department of mines and technical surveys, said his department is interested in possible use of Hovercraft in the Arctic.

"If one is brought to Canada we'd like to have a chance to investigate its worth."

One ATAC delegate from the prairies wasn't too impressed by the new-fangled transit vehicle:

"I think it's a pretty lousy raicraft," he said. "You couldn't get it out of a quarter-section if the gate was closed."

GROUNDED PILOTS TO FLY AGAIN

A transport department official said today the number of Canadians qualifying as new pilots is tapering off each year despite a steady increase in the number of aircraft registrations.

M. M Fleming, chief of the flight standards and air regulations division, said that in light of the trend the department is studying possible easing of its medical requirements for pilots.

"Some individuals who are not now flying will be flying again by the end of the year," he told the annual convention of the Air Transport Association of Canada.

Mr. Fleming was a member of a panel of federal officials who responded to questions from ATAC delegates.

Several of the delegates asked that the government change a regulation which allows farmer-pilots with 150 hours flying time to do commercial aerial spraying within 25 miles of their farms.

WITHIN FARM

One delegate said prairie farmers with four or more sections can spray anywhere within an 80-mile radius, and suggested the 25-mile radius be defined as from a point within the farm.

A Toronto engine overhauler complained that some aircraft owners are sending their engines to a school in the U.S. where overhauls are done "at practically no cost."

W. M. McLeish, civil aeronautical engineer with the transport department, said all the department can do is ensure that the overhaul meets Canadian standards. But the matter might be taken up by the revenue department.

Delegates also complained of inadequate enforcement of Air Transport Board regulations.

SMALL FINES

A. S. McDonald, senior advisor to the board, said one problem in enforcement is that offenders who cost legitimate air carriers thousands of dollars in business often get off with a warning from a magistrate or a fine "of $10 or $15."

Deputy Transport Minister J. R. Baldwin said the problem might be solved by placing key regulations under the Criminal Code. The same thing had already been done with respect to small boat regulations so as to permit any peace officer to investigate and lay charges.

At present all Air Transport Board regulations are enforceable only by the RCMP.

Mr. McDonald said many violations of the regulations are by foreign carriers and that talks are under way toward tightening up U.S.-Canadian border regulations for aircraft.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1964—PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

Under the terms of the federal student loan designed to ease the needy undergraduate's rough road through university, the boy or girl whose bid is accepted may draw up to $1,000 a year for a $5,000 total.

Six months after the student graduates, or discontinues his studies, Ottawa applies interest at 5.75 per cent to the sum borrowed, payment to be made in equal monthly installments over a period of from five to 10 years.

The applicant must prove a definite need.

He must also show that he has the qualifications necessary to pursue a university degree.

Kelly, the gutsy boy whose pride I've tried to spare through an alias, finds himself skewered on that last clause.

He has won acceptance as a freshman at a university recognized under the Loan Act. But that same university, in a judgment confirmed by British Columbia loan headquarters at UBC, has denied him federal aid.

This on the ground that his capabilities as a student have been judged marginal.

★ ★ ★

Although he has lost too much weight, Kelly is still a tough and husky specimen. Out with his timber cruiser boss in the Quatsino Inlet area, he worked in all weathers.

He can handle an 85-pound pack in mountain country.

Through much of the past five years, his home has been a tent or bunkhouse at the end of nowhere.

His campus clothes, bought two years ago, are still good, but he isn't sure what he'll do when his shoes wear out, and most of the time, he's hungry.

Through a rough grade 12 year, and now as a Uvic freshman, he has clung to a belief based on what he's seen, heard and experienced in the woods. This is that without specialized education, he will never win a place as a master forester in the B.C. timberlands.

The realization didn't come overnight. While it was forming, Kelly, still in his teens, spent his pay without thought for the morrow.

The result was that when in September of 1963 he began to ready himself for college through a repeat year of high school, it was with belt pulled tight. He was knocked off one job list as 'unreliable'—this, he maintains, because work-calls frequently came while he was in his forenoon classes.

He swamped groceries in a supermarket. A war veterans' association to which Kelly will be forever grateful, helped him with a cash assist.

★ ★ ★

Today at 21, he is just possibly the number-one hardship case of our Canadian universities . . . a distinction which both he and Victoria can get along handsomely without!

His skinny budget was blown sky-high by expenses he hadn't foreseen when he drew it up so confidently.

Apart from an occasional 60 cents an hour as a sitter, he has managed to earn about $12 in a store. Other students lend him the books he lacks when they can spare them.

He still has his car, which is currently running on fuel bought by students to whom he lends it. They leave an extra gallon or two in the tank.

At this point in his first year at our spanking new university, I am not making book on how things will turn out for Kelly, academically or any other way.

He insists, though, that he will not quit.

"When I came to that place," he says of UVIC, "I knew I'd found what I needed."

And at that place, if the flesh doesn't prove weaker than the stubborn spirit, Kelly means to stay.

★ ★ ★

His 1963-64 record, achieved under conditions anything but ideal for study, is a pass with a top rating of 'B'. It is not distinguished . . . not at all the sort they reward with scholarships or bursaries . . . but it did open a university's doors to Kelly.

On the strength of that same acceptable record, I think Kelly deserves another, and more thoughtful hearing of his request for a student loan.

I hope, should a review be denied, that some angel in the shape of a company, organization or great-hearted individual will grubstake him until Christmas and — if he passes those first weeding-out exams — through to next spring.

"If I can make it this year," he says earnestly, "I'll have four months in the woods to earn my next."

Victoria, how about it?

Crofton Site Favored For Chemical Project

$4 Million Proposal By Leading Company

By FRANK RUTTER

An international chemical firm is planning a $4 million Vancouver Island plant, probably at Crofton.

Officials of the Electric Reduction Company of Canada Ltd., announced today they are studying the location for an Island plant.

It would supply the Island's rapidly growing pulp and paper industry with sodium chlorate.

At the same time, Resources Minister Ray Williston said B.C. Hydro will provide new transmission facilities to bring power to the plant.

EXPANSION

As an interim measure to meet a heavy demand for chemicals in the pulp and paper industry, ERCO officials announced a $2,-million expansion of the company's existing plant in North Vancouver.

G. W. Mitchell, the firm's chlorate division manager, said ERCO is conducting a comprehensive survey of its Island plans.

JUNE DECISION

A decision is expected by next June.

The plant would be in production by 1967.

Under study are final location, although Crofton is favored, and the method of distribution of sodium chlorate—liquid or solid.

Mr. Mitchell described the market for the product as "rather staggering".

It is used for bleaching pulp.

The company already supplies about 4,500 tons a year to B.C. Forest Products Crofton plant.

The new chemical factory would supply the mill to be built for $60 million at Gold River by the Tahsis Company, Mr. Mitchell said.

The chemical plant would produce about 20,000 tons of chemical a year.

The cost would be at least $1 million, he said.

Mr. Mitchell said ERCO has already obtained satisfaction from B.C. Hydro that sufficient power will be available for the new factory.

Mr. Williston said Hydro is considering several possibilities, including conversion of existing transmission lines from alternating current to direct current.

24 HOURS

He described the chemical plant as a very high user of power, as it operates 24 hours a day every day of the year.

Mr. Mitchell said he was "enthusiastic" about the prospects for an Island chemical factory.

His firm, which also has a plant at Buckingham, Que., is a subsidiary of Albright and Wilson Ltd., of London.

"We congratulate them on taking the foresight to be there with products at the time the products are going to be required," Mr. Williston said.

It will mean the forest industry does not have to bear additional costs of bringing chemicals from outside B.C., he said.

PEARSON READY

Rathie Sure Of Subsidy For Transit

Mayor William Rathie of Vancouver, here for the official opening of City Hall, said today that Prime Minister Pearson enthusiastically supports a plan for subsidized urban transit in Canadian cities.

Mayor Rathie is chairman of a committee established by the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities to seek a Canadian counterpart to the new U.S. program of federal and state subsidies for mass transit systems in urban areas.

The move is seen as a more desirable alternative to the unending construction of freeways through the hearts of large cities which only increases traffic density.

"I have spoken to the prime minister twice about this and he is most enthusiastic — I don't think we'll have any problem there," said Mayor Rathie.

EARLY NEXT YEAR

He said the campaign for reaching agreement among the municipal, provincial and federal levels of government on a subsidy program will go into full swing early next year.

"We'd like to see the municipal elections all across the country out of the way before we really start to move on the discussion stage," he said.

Mayor Rathie and D. M. Goldie, QC, solicitor representing the Greater Victoria and Greater Vancouver municipalities opposing a proposed 25-cent B.C. Hydro bus fare, were closeted with Mayor R. B. Wilson for a strategy talk.

The Public Utilities Commission hearings on the transit authority's application are scheduled to resume in Vancouver Monday with the municipalities presenting their case against the requested increase.

NEW COMMANDER of Esquimalt-based ocean escort HMCS Beacon Hill is Lieut.-Cmdr. William Andrew Hughes of Kingston, Ont. He entered the navy as a cadet in 1944 and served in ships and establishments of the RCN and RN, specializing in anti-submarine warfare. Lieut.-Cmdr. Hughes was staff officer to the naval member, Canadian Joint Staff, London, England, before taking command of the Beacon Hill.

Fog-Confused Hunter Walks Out of Woods

A search for a Victoria hunter in the Shawnigan Lake area was called off today when he walked out of the woods.

James Clifford Moffat, 108 Glentana, had been missing since noon Tuesday.

After getting a lift into Port Renfrew on a logging truck he phoned his wife Joyce to tell her: "I'm all right."

LOST IN FOG

"I got lost in the fog and had to sleep the night under a tree."

When he eventually hit the Port Renfrew Road, the 26-year-old longshoreman was several miles from the point where he last saw his friend.

The friend, who is visiting the family from Calgary, reported Mr. Moffat missing Tuesday night.

Police, game wardens and friends from Victoria went into the bush at dawn today.

Mrs. Moffat drove to Port Renfrew to meet her husband who said he was suffering only from cold and dampness.

William Head Expanding To Hold 175

The minimum security penitentiary at William Head is being enlarged to accommodate 175 men instead of 140 as at present, an official said today.

The prison has been in operation since 1959—and is regarded as one of the most successful in Canada.

"British Columbia leads the nation in the percentage of prison population which can be safely entrusted to minimum security institutions such as William Head," Alan J. MacLeod, federal commissioner of penitentiaries, said in Vancouver Tuesday.

"Research is under way to determine why criminals in B.C. make better prisoners than those in other parts of Canada."

25% SAFE

Mr. MacLeod said 15 per cent of the national prison population can be usefully assigned to minimum security penitentiaries. But the percentage in B.C. is 25 per cent.

He added that the B.C. penitentiary at New Westminster will probably be closed at some future date after a new composite unit at Matsqui is completed.

"Jails without bars are working well," said Thomas Hall, western regional director of penitentiaries and former warden of the B.C. penitentiary.

If there are no bars there can be no escapes, he added, although there were a number of "walkaways" from William Head and the Agassiz Work Camp when the experiment was first undertaken.

Mr. Hall said there have been no "walkaways" from either William Head or the Agassiz camp for 18 months.

Full Airing Asked In 'Battle of Beds' At City Hospital

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A public meeting to bring together all sides in the Royal Jubilee Hospital dispute was proposed today.

"I think this is a worthwhile step," said hospital administrator George Masters. "We have nothing to hide."

The public affairs group of Victoria Chamber of Commerce will recommend such a meeting to the chamber's executive, which can accept or reject the recommendation.

Hospital administration officials and board directors, doctors, nurses and Health Minister Eric Martin would be invited.

The recommendation was reached after an hour's discussion by the public affairs group this morning.

At the meeting, Mr. Masters said 14 graduate nurses have left Jubilee in the past week and they are "very difficult to replace."

Hundreds of dollars had been spent advertising for qualified nurses across the country and in the United Kingdom with little response.

B.C. hospitals in general had a greater shortage of nurses this summer than in the last 15 years.

MORE SCHOOLS

He thought there should be some government leadership towards more schools for nurses and more assistance to hospitals to train more nurses.

There was a "radical" shortage of nursing schools and the Jubilee has a waiting list of girls wanting to take up nurse training.

The hospital employs many part-time nurses but there was a limit to how many could be taken on.

He also reported the difference between B.C. nurses' salary and that of other provinces is down about $10 or $15 a month. In B.C., a graduate nurse starts at $340 a month increasing to $400 in about four years.

HEALTH COMMISSION URGED

Doctor Wants End To Political Rule

The whole field of provincial health should be controlled by a non-partisan commission instead of politicians, a Victoria doctor said today.

Dr. D. M. Whitley, chief of medical staff at Royal Jubilee Hospital, issued the latest broadside in the controversy over vacant beds in the hospital.

He said he had nothing personal to say about Health Minister Eric Martin, but the present health administration gives him "almost dictatorial powers."

"The whole problem should not lie in the control of a political party," he said.

"There should be an independent commission of hand-picked men of high integrity."

Dr. Whitley suggested such a commission could be composed of medical, hospital and business representatives, with the know-how of operating a venture on sound economic lines.

He said the present system means that unqualified men are running the affairs of public health.

Dr. Whitley also called for a conference between medical staff from his hospital and Mr. Martin.

NO REPLY

He said such a meeting was sought by the doctors last May in a letter to Mr. Martin, but there had been no reply.

"If we can't get together and resolve our problems, I suppose there would have to be a public inquiry," he said.

"I don't know if this is the answer but it could be."

Dr. Whitley said his only concern was as a medical man trying to cure his patients.

As such, he was disturbed because there is space for more beds in his hospital, he said.

O'Grady Finished As Counsel For Purchaser

B.C. government purchasing commissioner G. E. P. Jones is currently without a defence lawyer and without a date for trial on charges of accepting favors from a car dealer.

City lawyer T. P. O'Grady said he is no longer acting for Mr. Jones, after carrying his defence through a preliminary hearing.

Two other lawyers who were asked to take the case to a higher court are also unable to appear for Mr. Jones—Douglas McK. Brown and T. P. Dohm, both of Vancouver.

Former Liberal MLA George Gregory of Victoria has been asked to conduct the Jones defence, but his decision will depend upon the date of the trial.

Earliest possible date is next Monday in County Court before Judge M. T. Drake.

Also under consideration is Dec. 10.

Teacher Ready To Seek Election

Another candidate has tentatively entered the Saanich municipal election race.

School teacher Pat Thomas, 32, of 1922 Wende, says he is considering standing for council.

Three seats will be up for election on December 12.

Woman, 77, Keeps Bag; Snatcher Runs

A youth tried to snatch a handbag from a 77-year-old woman as she walked along Douglas Street Tuesday night with her 72-year-old brother.

Miss Mary Wright, 150 Douglas, held on to her bag and wouldn't let go even when she fell down on the ground in the scuffle.

The prowler, described as about 16 years old and well dressed, fled. The incident occurred near South Park School.

Miss Wright's brother, Reginald Porter, took her to St. Joseph's Hospital where she was given a checkup for bruises and police were called.

Burglar Fails In Attempt On Store Safe

An amateur safecracker made a half-hearted attempt to crack the safe at Champion's Ltd., 905 Fort, overnight Tuesday.

He broke into the furniture store by a rear window and attacked the safe. He succeeded only in breaking the dial.

City police said the burglar gave up and left without taking anything from the store.

Driver Thrown From Pickup

A 64-year-old man suffered head injuries when thrown out of a pickup truck in a collision on rain-swept streets at Douglas and Queens Tuesday afternoon.

Norman Nelson, 1751 Kings, is in satisfactory condition today at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

City police said Mr. Nelson was apparently going south on Douglas and turning on to Queens when he was in collision with a car driven by Dennis Perkins, 1065 San Marino.

Topics of the Day

Saanich police said an eight-year-old child was responsible for setting several small fires in a home in the 3300-block Richmond Monday afternoon.

Residents of the home were away at the time and neighbors noticed what was happening. The boy caused little damage.

Police said no action is being taken against the youngster.

Doncaster School will hold its fall fair Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the school.

Proceeds from the fair will be used to purchase a controlled reader machine for the school. This machine resembles a movie projector and flashes words and sentences on a screen at varying speeds to help students improve their reading ability.

★ ★ ★

Six ocean escorts from the RCN's Pacific Command will leave Monday for a series of anti-submarine exercises with the submarine HMCS Grilse.

The training cruise will also include visits to Vancouver and San Francisco.

Ships participating will be HMCS Sussexvale, New Glasgow, Jonquiere, Antigonish, Stettler and Beacon Hill. The squadron is commanded by Captain E. P. Earnshaw.

The ships will visit San Francisco Nov. 13-15 and Vancouver, with the exception of the Grilse, Nov. 20-22.

★ ★ ★

Seaward firing practice will be conducted Saturday and Sunday between 10 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. by 15 Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery (Militia).

★ ★ ★

A 44-year-old woman and her 18-year-old daughter were shaken up when their car was in collision with another vehicle at Bay and Shelbourne Tuesday night.

Mrs. Peggy Beevers, 2974 Oakdowne, and her daughter Rosemary were released from hospital after a checkup.

City police identified the driver of the other car involved as Thomas Kirkwood, 3800 Dobbs.

Victoria Cymrodorion Society will meet tonight at 8 at the Empress Hotel.

A 19-year-old woman driver and her five-year-old passenger were taken to hospital this morning after a rear-end collision on Oak Bay Avenue at Elgin.

Wendy Martin, 1054 Holmes, and the child, Donald Skinner, 3777 Cedar Hill Road, were discharged after treatment for bruises and small cuts.

Oak Bay police said their car collided with the rear of a compressor towed by a truck driven by Michael Danchuk, 2621 Mount Stephen.

Prof. Wilfred Johns of the University of Victoria left Tuesday for a three-day conference in Edmonton of the Canadian Society of Education Through Art.

Prof. Johns is chairman of Uvic's fine arts and art education committees.

★ ★ ★

Dr. Henry Gilliland, 840 Richmond, is reported in good condition today at Royal Jubilee Hospital recovering from bruises suffered in an accident last Friday.

Dr. Gilliland, dean of education at the University of Victoria, is expected to be released from hospital shortly.

He was involved in a two-car collision at Richmond and Leighton. Driver of the other car was Janet Strang, 1924 Belmont.

Ask The Times

Q. I would like to know which denominations in Victoria are affiliated with the World Council of Churches. A.E.

A. All members of the Canadian Council of Churches are members of the world council.

They are: Anglican Church of Canada; Baptist Federation of Canada; Churches of Christ (Disciples); Evangelical United Brethren Church; Greek Orthodox Church; Presbyterian Church in Canada; Reformed Episcopal Church; Russian Orthodox Church; Salvation Army; Society of Friends; Syrian Antiochian Orthodox Church, and United Church of Canada.

Affiliates are YMCA, YWCA; Student Christian Movement; In Friendly Association; Armenian Apostolic Church, and United Lutheran Church in America.

Q. Is anyone, other than a property-owner, entitled to vote on a school board referendum where money is involved? E.G.S.

A. No; only property-owners can vote on money bylaws.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to The Times, addressed to "Ask The Times", Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

This saucy rickrack ruffled bikini is designed in pin dot cotton by Beatrice Pines and shelters under its own baby smock with the same rickrack trim. (Getz of Montreal.)

More Skin and Less Suit Gives Sugar 'n Spice Look to Swimwear

MONTREAL—More skin than suit, more shapely figure revealers, more tiered and ruffled femininity — that's Beatrice Pines' way of expressing the swimwear trend in her all-woman Sea Siren collection for '64/'65.

Miss Pines' bikinis are naughty but nice, sheltering more often than not under their coats or smocks, they are sometimes sleek stretch scanties, sometimes saucy cotton confections, sometimes lacy froths. Perhaps the most fetching are those composed of voile done in prints like brown and white polka dots or black and white harlequin checks. The bareness of these is veiled under sheer covertops with the polka dot one fretted with lace.

This mood of utter femininity is echoed by Miss Pines in her suits made up of three deep frills of pleated lace, in her suits with knife pleated silky jersey skirts, in the Swiss embroidered knits and cottons and in the printed silk jersey blousons which gracefully drape into the figure.

CUT OUT OR IN

Apart from the bikini Miss Pines has two ways of revealing the figure—it's either by what's cut out of the suit or what's cut into it.

Her scissors have been busy snipping away at midriffs, slashing decolletages and cutting out sides. The provocative midriff exposure gives the suit a one-piece look in front, a two-piece look in back and is particularly well exemplified in a polka dot stretch maillot. Bars and lacing heighten the allure of side cut-outs and low tide plunges. One clinging stretch maillot is ruffled with lace down its waist plunging decolletages which is held together with a series of tiny bars.

When Miss Pines is not cutting more exposure out of a suit, she's cutting more figure shaping into it.

This figure glorifying is evident in her moulded Surfers, both one and two piece styles, interpreted in a striped stretch series woven to Miss Pines' specifications so that the striping occurs (Just below the waist, or at the hip) where it will have most impact.

COLORS THAT BITE

The great curve makers are also shown in sculptured knits, cut velvets and in a gleaming Antron boulce in brilliant colors like powerhouse pink and an orange with a real bite in it. Many of the boucles are appliqued with giant white flowers.

Short curving tunics with a gentle flare turn up in the collection in a hand screen flower printed nylon stretch and in a soft jersey printed with a fine abstract pattern.

The illusion of bareness is heightened in Miss Pines' one and two-pieces suits which are covered with see-through nylon fishnet.

As is her custom Miss Pines has done a large group of after swimwear including beach coats, wraps, shifts and smocks, interpreted in printed terries and in sharkskin. Her newest beach cover-up for '65 is an ankle length beach shift in printed terry.

Hold Luncheon Council

Arbutus Toastmistress Club of Victoria was hostess at the recent luncheon meeting of Council No. 10, Members of the International Toastmistress Clubs, held in the Olde England Inn.

Council chairman, Mrs. R. Crowley presided and grace was given by Mrs. E. Goold.

Highlight of the meeting was a buzz session conducted by the Nanaimo club and entitled "Council is a Guiding Force to Club."

Toastmistress for the afternoon was Mrs. J. R. Pipes who chose "Inspiration" as her theme.

Moderator for a panel discussion on "Factors Causing low Membership" presented by the Chemainus Club was Mrs. V. McMahon. Mrs. S. J. Westerheim was moderator for a workshop presented by the Nanaimo club and entitled "Leadership Characteristics." On education, Marina Club presented "Our Council Budgets" with Mrs. E. R. Gustason as moderator.

Mrs. D. Wende conducted a question and answer discussion on questions from the "question box."

Mrs. C. C. Warren was evaluator. Vote of thanks was given by Mrs. Audrey Hess, Chemainus, and the closing thought by Mrs. M. Winstone.

$500 Realized

A sum of approximately $500 was realized by the White Shrine of Jerusalem at a recent bazaar and tea held in the K of P Hall on Cormorant Street.

The affair was opened by Mrs. T. F. Ward, supreme committee member. She was introduced by Mrs. M. Whyte, worthy high priestess.

BE SMART—

Lost in the maze of a Persian market? Ah, no . . . it's just a couple of the prettiest and exotic at-home slippers one could imagine. Rich colors, rich fabrics (metallic brocade, lurexed abstract patterns), gold touches, one fur-trimmed.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Same Story . . . Too Many Calories Make You Fat

Food has always been closely tied in with our lives, not only for nourishment of the body but also nourishment of the spirit and heart. The aroma of a certain dish can bring up vivid memories and a cup of hot tea can soothe the troubled soul. Through history certain foods have been believed to have almost magic powers.

Lowman

The October issue of one magazine carried an extremely interesting article by Doctor Fredrick J. Stare, Harvard's distinguished nutritionist. Here are a few of the facts he called to our attention:

Beets do not have special qualities in building blood.

Fish and celery are not brain foods.

Will rare steak make you strong? Dr. Stare says, "Certainly it is rich in good quality protein, but so are fish, eggs, milk and overcooked steak."

Vitamin pills by themselves will not give you adequate nourishment. They are simply catalysts which enable other nutriments to function more effectively.

The treatment for overweight consists of a decreased calorie intake (food) and an increased calorie output (physical activity).

Dr. Stare also believes that one must have a strong incentive to reduce successfully. He says, "The main factor in weight reduction, in my opinion, is strong and continued motivation, a genuine desire to reduce and to maintain a proper weight."

Of course there are many motivations. The most usual one for a woman is the desire to be more attractive in appearance. Then there is the wish for good health and a long life, or even more activating, the fear for one's health or life. Success in a career may provide the motivation.

This nutritionist also points out that more calories than you need will make you fat, whatever the source. Even a high protein food like steak contains around 25 per cent fat.

If you would like to have my tested hip slimming exercises send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet number 3 to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Their London Home Is Good for Leg Muscles

Former Times staffer, Judy Richardson, and her friend, Linda Scales, after an action-packed jaunt across continental Europe, have now settled down in London, England. From time to time we will bring you their impressions of what life has to offer a career girl in England.

By JUDY RICHARDSON

"Top bell for J. Richardson and L. Scales. Ring four times."

That's the visitor's introduction to the quarters occupied by Linda and myself.

Richardson

While he waits for the door to open, John Visitor can avoid looking at the two over-flowing garbage cans guarding the entrance way by inspecting the three-legged tables, useless radios (called wirelesses, of course) and other assorted junk in the "antique shop" which occupies the bottom floor of the building.

Eventually a face will peer around the door at him, checking to make sure he isn't the man wearing a black suit and carrying a little black suitcase who asked the girls downstairs one day if they did photographic modelling.

Inspection passed, the visitor finds himself hurried through a dark, dirty, dreary hallway, going up some worn, scratched and marked stairs, two flights to Top Flat.

Penthouse . . . English Style

On the last landing is our kitchen. Cheap but bright wallpaper has covered up the mess that used to be the walls. Bright yellow dish pan and dish towel, dust pan and broom give a cheery, if domestic, note. There's a sink on one wall, a gas stove with an oven and a tea trolley gleaned from the warehouse of the antique—alias junk—shop, whose owner is also our landlord.

Two separate doors lead off into the bedroom and living room. A bullfight poster given us by a waiter in a Majorcan cafe announces the visitor's arrival at the latter. Inside tasteful wallpaper on an old English theme covers three walls. If the visitor is up to it by this time, we give him a lesson in riding to the hounds as repeatedly pictured in three successive tableaux labeled "The Meet," "Full Cry" and "Whoop"—but not one of them Tally Ho!

Here too a bit of inexpensive wallpaper has covered up the only (?) defect of the room. One wall was covered with bamboo paper that came alive with peeking eyes the longer you looked at it.

Rolling Hills of Rug

The furniture is modern, if worn, and matches. And, we have a Persian rug on the floor that looked lovely when we came but seems to be rolling up into little balls and disappearing now.

Down one flight is the bathroom we share with the three girls in the second floor flat and Henney, the Afrikaan who lives next door to us upstairs.

Already change is taking place. Next week Henney goes home to South Africa after three years in England. His married brother who lives in London doesn't think he is eating enough and is paying his passage home. We'll miss the plaintive notes of the flute he played whenever he was depressed.

The girls downstairs are splitting up and one of them, Angela, is moving into Henney's room. She'll use our kitchen and pay us 10 "bob" a week ($1.50).

The flat abounds with slot metres that have to be fed with one or two shilling pieces in order to keep the gas going for the kitchen stove, the bath water and the heaters in the living room and bedroom. After only a couple of weeks of nippy weather, we've become acutely conscious of the shape of a two-shilling piece. We are salting them away in odd corners, like squirrels storing acorns for the winter.

Miniature United Nations

We buy our groceries in a store run by a Greek family and feel quite at home listening to the Italians and French who also deal there. If we were inclined to spend money on meals out, we have a choice within two blocks of Indian, Pakistani, Chinese and Italian restaurants or a "jolly old English fish and chip joint."

There are three movie theatres within walking distance. Quite appropriately, the closest one is an international cinema.

Indeed, such is the cosmopolitan atmosphere that if you ask someone on the street for directions, you are not sure of being understood or of being able to understand their English.

We're even told by some very British friends that the pub next door is "no good" because it is full of Irish "blokes." We're more bothered by the entertainment which emanates from that direction on Saturday and Sunday nights. Bless the English for having an 11 o'clock "Time, please, gentlemen" or the singing might go on all night!

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Noels, 1658 Pearl Street, announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Georgina Marie, to Mr. Neil Donovan McLeod, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. McLeod of West Vancouver. The marriage will be solemnized on Saturday, November 14, at 7 p.m. in St. Patrick's Church, Oak Bay. Fr. M. J. McNamara will officiate. (Chapman Photography.)

MARRIED IN PORT ALBERNI

Train Accents Imported Bridal Gown Worn at Recent Up-Island Ceremony

An imported gown of peau de soie over silk was worn by Donelda Armajane Breitung when she became the bride of Douglas David Grafton. The gown was styled with a fitted waistline and the skirt extended into a train. Her illusion veil misted from a headpiece of orange blossoms and seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink and white carnations, chrysanthemums and sweetheart roses.

Parents of the principles are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Breitung of Long Beach, B.C., and Mr. and Mrs. David D. Grafton of Quadra Island, B.C. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

PINK AND WHITE

Baskets of pink and white carnations and white chrysanthemums decorated the Holy Family Church in Port Alberni. Pink and white sweetheart roses were on the altar and pews were marked by pink and white bows and rosebuds.

Fr. E. Johnson officiated at the ceremony.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Sam Seminoff wore a gown of yellow peau de soie and a coronet of roses over net. Bridesmatrons Mrs. Pauline Holden, sister of the bride and Mrs. S. Simon, sister of the groom, and bridesmaid Miss Christine Grafton, sister of the groom, chose gowns of blue and coronets of roses and net. They carried bouquets of pink and white carnations.

Flower girls, Cindy Holden, niece of the bride, Cassy Simon and Fawn Seminoff, nieces of the groom, and Jane Milton, wore white frocks and carried nosegays of pink and white roses.

Best man was Sam Seminoff and ushering guests were William and Andrew Cesckl.

A three-tier wedding cake, made and decorated by the bride's mother, centred the bride's table at a reception held in the new Greenwood Hotel, Alberni. Guests' tables were decorated with pink and white candles in silver candelabra and silver vases of pink and white chrysanthemums, carnations, roses and white satin streamers.

Sam Seminoff proposed the toast to the bride.

For a honeymoon trip, the bride donned an imported tweed suit with cream hat and brown accessories. Pink and white sweetheart roses en corsage completed her ensemble.

The couple will make their home in Ucluelet.

Bankruptcy In Store for Richest Provinces If They Secede Canada

Ontario and Quebec are Canada's "kept provinces", the Canadian Women's Club of Victoria was told on Tuesday.

Guest speaker, Dr. Frank MacKinnon, president of the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Foundation and principal of Prince of Wales College in Charlottetown, PEI, elaborated:

"If Ontario and Quebec were separated from the rest of Canada, they would go bankrupt within six months. Sir John A. MacDonald's national protective tariff policy has kept the Canadian manufacturing industry thriving. And, without it, our two richest provinces could not survive."

He added, "When we realize that our government is a combination of two of the toughest systems in the world—British parliamentarism and American federalism—we should treat it as something of a miracle.

"The tragedy of our education is that confederation is treated as a dull affair. We are terribly impersonal about our history. When we think of confederation, we picture dull negotiations with equally dull, bearded men taking part."

He compared the American knowledge of their history to Canada's. "Nearly every American knows every woman who has ever been in the White House, from Martha Washington to Lady Bird Johnson, while most of us don't even know if our great men were married."

Dr. MacKinnon stressed that if we delved far enough into history, we would find that the Fathers of Confederation were far from dull. "About one third of their time was spent on negotiations and the remainder enjoying themselves.

"We must pay a high tribute to these men who had no definite idea of what type of government they wanted. But, through discussing, arguing, compromising and finally agreeing they brought us a government which has survived for a century."

He stated, "If the Fathers of Confederation could be here today, I'm sure they would tell us that we have done well so far and that it is up to us to carry on for another century."

"But," he warned, "while we have an enormously powerful system of government—one of the largest in the world — we are still backward in relation to culture and tradition."

These give strength and character to a nation, he stated, and give loyalty a sense of purpose. It has only been during the last decade that we have begun to build theatres across Canada.

"We need them. They will give us the culture we need to strengthen the nation and the tradition to hand down to the future.

"We have spent 50 years moving politicians and businessmen around. Let's start moving Canadians. If we do this we will strengthen the fibre of the nation, both economically and politically."

In closing, Dr. MacKinnon stated, "Canadians must realize their complicated system of government, appreciate their blessings, carry them on and make them work in future years."

Miss Elizabeth Forbes presided at the meeting that was held in St. Andrew's kirk hall. A vote of thanks was extended to the speaker by vice-president, Mrs. Robert Wallace.

Following the meeting, Dr. MacKinnon was honored at a tea in the social suite. Those who attended included Mrs. F. M. Corbett, Miss Forbes, Mrs. H. H. Youson, Mrs. D. Leslie Macdonnell, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. A. T. N. Cowley, Mrs. J. H. Brown, Mrs. T. H. Johns, Mrs. Frank Mack, Miss Mary Ashworth, Mrs. Harry Smith, Mrs. W. H. Wilson, Mrs. Percy B. Scurrah, Mrs. R. G. McKee, Mrs. Harold Smith, Mrs. Dal MacLeod and Mrs. T. C. Evans.

Mother Flies From Norway To Have Baby In Canada

NELSON, B.C. (CP)—It probably cost Mrs. Erik Thorberg about $1,500 to have her second child.

Mrs. Thorberg travelled from her home in Nesbyen, Norway, to this southeast British Columbia community so she would not be forced to have her baby at home, attended only by a midwife.

Under the socialized medicine scheme in Norway, she said, she could not enter hospital or be cared for by a doctor.

Her first child was born under the Scandinavian country's "security from the cradle to the grave" and she didn't like it.

"If you think you have to wait a long time for a doctor here, you should go to Norway," she said.

So Mrs. Thorberg packed herself and her first child off to British Columbia, to stay with friends until the happy event.

Air fare from Castlegar, near Nelson, to Oslo, Norway, is nearly $727 tourist.

Dr. J. G. McMurchy, who delivered the latest Thorberg baby, said the hopital charges per-day in Nelson range from about $25-$30.

Doctor's fee for pre-natal, delivery and post-natal care is about $100.

Assuming Mrs. Thorberg spent only $5 a day in the three months she was in Canada, incidental expenses would total $450.

Mrs. Thorberg moved to Norway three years ago after she married Erik Thorberg, whom she met while visiting friends in Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Humphries, 1271 Glyn Road, will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary next Wednesday at an "at home" in the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lord, 2975 Irma Street, from 2 to 5 p.m. The couple was married on November 11, 1914, in All Saints' Anglican Church in Watrous, Sask., with Rev. John Harrison officiating. They moved to Victoria in 1923. They have one daughter, Mrs. Lord (Elaine), and two sons, Ian and Jack, all of Victoria. Another son, Allastair, lives in Kamloops. There are 10 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Be Tactful, Mom!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: There is a teacher who should have been retired years ago, but she is still teaching. She seems to get pleasure out of making her pupils miserable. She has been at the same school ever since I can remember, and I have yet to hear a good word about her. She has picked on my son, and has ridiculed and humiliated him more than once. Now he looks for excuses (sore throat, stomach) so he can stay home. I am afraid to report her to the principal because she might find out who made the complaint and take it out on my son. What can be done?

CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Ask the principal if others have complained about the veteran teacher, and state the problem as you know it—without indicating the teacher. An understanding principal will help you—and your son.

DEAR ABBY: What is a good curfew time for a boy 17 years of age? In your opinion, should a boy that age be permitted to go "out" every evening until midnight and on the weekends much later still? He tells me that other mothers don't even know what time their sons get in because they are asleep. Unfortunately (for him) I am the kind of mother who can't sleep until he is in the house. Your answer, if printed, might help many mothers because I know this is a common problem. Thank you.

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: A 17-year-old boy is either in high school (summers excepted) or in college. In either case, he has no business gadding about "every evening until midnight." If he is out of school not to return, well—he'll consider himself "on his own" whether you like it or not. By 17 a boy's character is fairly well formed. And you can only hope that you did all you could to form it well.

DEAR ABBY: We have recently moved from the midwest to Paterson, New Jersey, and the way these Easterners strike up a conversation is rather amazing to me. It is, "What line are you in?"

I have always thought it was rude to ask a question like that, but it seems so common here that maybe I am wrong. Will you please set this Kansas cornball straight?

TOPEKA

DEAR TOPEKA: It IS rude. But rudeness knows no state lines and has been known to jump national boundaries and oceans as well.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Maternity Wear Adds Extra Fashion Flair

By PENNY SAVER

Penny had a few friends in for coffee recently and one of them told us that she was expecting a new baby. But instead of being ecstatic about the whole thing, she was quite morose. "Just in time for Christmas," she moaned. "I can't go to any parties or dinners looking like a shapeless sack!" However, Penny, in her travels, has found maternity clothes with a new look!

The latest fashions have come to maternity clothes. Now, the mother-to-be can be smart and stylish in clothes made especially for her. Casual wardrobes are enhanced by the new look in blouses which feature the "stock" or tie neckline or ruffled lace at the wrists and throat. Bottoms of the blouses are slightly fuller for freer movement. These start in price at $3.95 and range up to $7.95.

Stretch slacks with the foot strap to give a long, slim line are all the rage in sports wear. These are available in maternity styles, too. Pants are of stretch nylon and viscose and have an elasticized "kangaroo pouch" which will not stretch out of shape. Slim, tapered slacks also contain an elasticized front yet this will not cause slacks to ride up. The elastic allows free movement and yet gives firm support. These range in cost from $5.98 to $7.00.

If parties loom large on your agenda, don't despair. Fashionable styles for "after five" are specially tailored for maternity. One smart style is a wrap-around crepe gown—which, incidentally, won a fashion award. Going discotheque? Why not try a floating, flowing black chiffon gown which flutters and flatters? For a more sophisticated affair, there is a pink double-knit slim skirt topped by a sleeveless over-blouse with a scoop neckline.

The store has many dresses for day wear, too. The shift style with a wide pleat extending from just below the waistline is particularly attractive. Dresses are from $10.98 to $29.98. (Many women who are not expecting a new addition to the family really go for these outfits, too.)

Maternity wear is now in the forefront of fashion. Give Penny a call at 382-3131, and find out how to head the best-dressed poll.

Wives 'Invade' Wardroom

The uniforms of naval officers were banished from the wardroom of HMCS Naden, Tuesday evening, when their wives "invaded" the establishment in force, to see a fashion show and raise $230 for the Women's Auxiliary to the Royal Canadian Navy.

Service wives have a reputation for good grooming and Tuesday's show more than lived up to their expectations.

It was apparent that, if there is a secret to haute couture this season, it lies in velvet. Dresses, coats, skirts and jackets in this most feminine of fabrics, delighted the eye from beginning to end.

DOGWOOD BLOSSOMS

For the sports-conscious, there was a perky velvet ski jacket, splashed with dogwoods and colored in silvery white, beige and black. Teamed up with black stretchie slims, it proved a show stopper.

A black chiffon and velvet rose peeked from the waistline of a slim ankle-length black velvet formal that was styled with a graceful low rounded neckline, slim front panel skirt, gentled by soft pleats at the sides.

Dashing and durable was a raincoat made of water-repellant velvet in a brilliant scarlet.

The coat was double-breasted and accented with a large shawl collar, neatly notched lapels and youthful swagger back.

OLD WORLD CHARM

Quietly feminine, a black velvet A-line skirt proved a delightful complement to a white cotton plisse blouse that whispered of the "old days" with its full Puritan sleeves and diminutive tucking, flattered with insets of delicate lace.

Just for a touch of the practical, the show also offered a view of one of those magical all-weather cotton coats, made to resemble leather.

The pecan-toned coat was styled with a low half-belt at back and gave little indication of its sturdy qualities, which include being able to survive a session in the family refrigerator or washing machine.

Puritan collars were much in evidence but nowhere more effectively than on the three-quarter-length theatre coat of pink brocade, glamorized with an overlay of gold. Cuffed elbow-length sleeves added to the interest. The coat was teamed with a matching sleeveless sheath, deceivingly simple in style yet obviously haute couture.

COMPLETE WITH DICKIE

One coat that brought a wave of approval was in the popular coachman style and fashioned of black wool whipcord. The neat Chelsea collar was given an extra filip by a matching dickie. Both collar and cuffs were of stitched bengaline.

Another "star" was the after-five dress in black crepe that was as charming as a Japanese water color with its high mandarin collar and deep-set kimono sleeves that were lavishly trimmed with gold, antique embroidery, highlighted with colourful brilliants.

For those with a yen for the luxurious, there was a coat of cranberry red brushed mohair, complete with a huge collar of ranch mink.

Auxiliary members acting as models were Sheila Nicholson, Lilah Milne, "Scotty" Barton, Linda Essery, Mary Winnett, Ann Waller, Sylvia Wagner, Nettie Wood, Joanne Tye and Francis Pye. Commentator was Joan Fraser and styles were from Gray's of Mayfair.

Guests were greeted by president, Mrs. Charles Jessop. General convener was Mrs. Ronald Perks.

Premier's Wife To Officiate At Annual Bazaar

Mrs. W. A. C. Bennett, wife of the premier of British Columbia will officially open the annual bazaar of the Esquimalt Salvation Army Home League. Affair will be held on Saturday, Nov. 14, from 2 to 4:30 p.m. in the Esquimalt Citadel.

President, Mrs. W. Woodcock will be general convener. In charge of the various stalls will be: fancywork, Mrs. P. Porter; aprons, Mrs. M. Bach; white elephant, Mrs. G. McWilliams; home cooking and a fishpond for children, Mrs. H. Caldwell.

Mrs. K. Thornett is in charge of tea arrangements.

Church Group Plans Sale And Tea Party

A sale of work will be featured at the annual tea, to be given by the Evening Branch of Christ Church Cathedral Woman's Auxiliary in Memorial Hall, Saturday at 2.15 p.m.

Guests will be greeted by president, Mrs. Enid Webster; Mrs. Brian Whitlow and Mrs. E. Gilbert. Opening the affair will be Miss Elizabeth Forbes.

In charge of tea arrangements are the Misses Amy Hall and Flossie Lawrence. Tea tickets will be sold by Mrs. B. Marriott and Miss Kitty Maclure.

Presiding at the refreshment table will be Mrs. C. C. Riach, Mrs. H. E. Hubbard, Mrs. H. S. Langford and Miss M. St. Clair.

Home cooking will be sold by Mrs. S. Leal, Mrs. C. Crerar and Mrs. E. Stewart. A stall of Christmas cards and gifts will be in charge of Miss W. Plummer and Miss E. Fowler.

Returns Home

Miss Eve Lettice returned to her Faithful Street home last Monday after attending the annual meeting of the Canadian Figure Skating Association, held at the Montreal Airport Hilton Hotel in Dorval, P.Q. While in the east, Miss Lettice visited Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Hunt, formerly of Victoria and now living in Pierrefonds, P.Q.

It will be "all hands to the coffee urns" when St. Mary's Evening Woman's Auxiliary holds its annual bazaar in the parish hall on Elgin Street this Saturday. Seen on a "trial run" are, left to right, Mrs. W. M. Smith, Mrs. A. H. Stokes and Mrs. D. M. Levin. Affair will be opened at 11:30 a.m. by Mrs. W. R. Osler, member of the WA diocesan board. A smorgasbord luncheon of "turkey and trimmins" will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and tea from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. Stalls will feature novelties, knitting, home cooking, attic treasures, books, jewelry, plants, candy and toys.

Federal Food Predictions Have Eggs Down in Price This Month

OTTAWA (CP) — A seasonal drop in egg prices this month was predicted by the federal agriculture department in its monthly food outlook today.

The November bulletin said prices for broiler chickens and turkeys are likely to remain unchanged for the present.

The department's other predictions for November:

Beef: Good and choice beef marketings should continue well above last year's volume, while commercial and utility grades are expected to increase seasonally. Prices for lower grades will move down slightly as heavier supplies come on the market.

Pork: Larger marketings compared with last year in both the east and the west may tend to push prices slightly lower, although most of the expected seasonal drop in prices occurred in late October.

Lamb: Supplies of fresh Canadian lamb are near their seasonal peak, and prices at their seasonal low.

Apples: The second largest crop of apples on record is readily available on all markets. The department says the consumer will get more for his dollar if he buys by the bushel.

Potatoes: With a smaller North American crop in 1964 prices are expected to average above those of last season.

Onions, carrots and turnips: All are available in good supply at generally attractive prices.

The bulletin adds that canned and frozen sour cherries are in ebundant supply as a result of a record crop in Ontario.

TODAY'S RECIPE

GINGER-APPLE SQUARES WITH CHEESE TOPPING

Two small tart apples, 1 (15-ounce) package gingerbread mix, 3 tablespoons brown sugar.

One (8-ounce) package cream cheese, ¼ cup granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon orange juice, ¼ cup chopped toasted pecans.

For the cake:

Butter an 8-inch square cake pan. Preheat oven to 350 deg. F. Wash and core apples (do not peel). Cut into nine ¼-inch rings. Make up gingerbread mix according to package directions. Spread evenly in prepared pan. Top with apple rings. Bake in preheated oven 20 minutes. Sprinkle with brown sugar and continue to bake until done, about 20 minutes longer. Cool on cake rack. Cut into nine squares.

For the topping:

Cream cheese until soft; beat in granulated sugar and orange juice. Continue to beat until fluffy. Spoon on squares of warm gingerbread. Sprinkle with toasted pecans.

Makes nine servings.

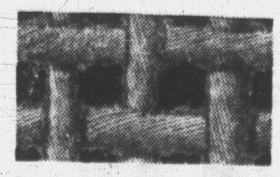
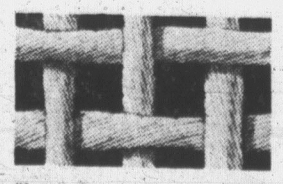
JAVEX-clean diapers are safer

JAVEX purifies and softens diapers to guard against painful diaper rash

Washing and rinsing baby's diapers is not always enough. They may still contain harmful germs, the fabric may be too harsh for baby's tender skin. "Javex" will lift and dissolve non-hygienic residue to give an extra margin of protection and whiteness. Use "Javex" for diapers a mother can trust.



The fibres of this diaper are dull-looking, stiff and irritating to baby's tender skin. Cause is Residue containing Harmful bacteria the eye alone can't detect.



"Javex" has made the fibres of this diaper hygienically clean. Rough residue has been dissolved from the fabric, diaper now safer and more gentle for your baby. Notice how white the fabric is thanks to "Javex".

Let JAVEX® do the job for you.

Political Leaders Rejoice But Caouette Scores Vote

CONFINED to a hospital bed, Edward M. Kennedy (Dem.), was re-elected to a second term in the U.S. Senate. He won the Massachusetts seat two years ago to fill the unexpired term of his brother, the late president John F. Kennedy.

OTTAWA — Canadian political leaders and newspapers generally rejoiced today in Lyndon B. Johnson's landslide U.S. presidential election victory.

They saw it as a strong personal mandate for the president and a reassuring reflection of the basic attitude of American society.

Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson, who watched Tuesday night's returns on television, was expected to express Canada's official congratulations to Johnson in a personal message sometime today.

Aides said Pearson, who has met Johnson on at least three occasions, was "pleased" with the U.S. result.

Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker called the result a "well-merited victory" for Johnson in which "the free world will rejoice."

"President Johnson's mandate is decisive," said Diefenbaker in Toronto. "It inspires confidence in him which I share, along with the majority of the Canadian neighbors of the United States.

"The American president has demonstrated his capacity in international affairs and the free world will rejoice in the renewal of his leadership."

The lone critical comment among Canadian political leaders came from firebrand Real Caouette, head of the right-wing French-Canadian 'Creditiste party, who denounced the Johnson victory as "a victory for socialism and communism." He attributed the president's overwhelming vote to the support of "gangsters" and financiers.

Across the nation, newspapers and broadcasting media devoted most of their prime space and air time to reviewing the results and the reasons behind them.

First editorial reaction reflected the general pre-election trend among Canadian newspapers which had been all but unanimous in their support of Johnson.

. . . KENNEDY

The tag of "carpetbagger" had been hung on Kennedy by both Keating and some disgruntled Democrats. Kennedy entered the race in New York despite the fact that he was a Massachusetts voter and had his official residence in Virginia. This made it impossible for him to cast a ballot in his own contest.

When Congress convenes in January there will be two Kennedys in the Senate, Robert will join his brother, Sen. Edward M. (Ted) Kennedy, who easily won re-election in Massachusetts although he was unable to campaign because of a back injury suffered in a plane accident last June.

VOTER APPROVAL

Without once referring to his brother, the late president, Kennedy found in the overwhelming vote for President Johnson and the Democrats an expression of voter approval for the Kennedy administration.

He told a cheering throng in the Democratic headquarters at the Statler-Hilton Hotel in Manhattan that the vote was a "mandate to continue what we started four years ago."

Kennedy dedicated himself to his six years as a Senator by quoting an except from a poem. He noted that "some poet" had stated: "Come, my friends, it is not too late to build a better world."

"This is what I dedicated myself to in the next six years," Kennedy concluded.

His supporters said some day he would be the Democratic presidential candidate.

Kennedy himself refuted this claim with a negative "I expect President Johnson will be a candidate again in 1968—after that . . ."

ADVISERS OUSTED

Apart from taking the Senate seat the Democrats also reversed the majority of the New York House of Representatives. The delegation took over control of the state Legislature and ousted two of Governor Rockefeller's closest advisers.

Assembly Speaker Joseph F. Carlino and veteran state Sen. Walter Mahoney, who had both guided Rockefeller's programs through legislature, fell under Democratic votes.

The defeat for Keating was a serious blow to New York's governor and the eastern moderates who hoped to try and rebuild the Republican Party nationally. The moderates fought Goldwater's nomination at San Francisco and predicted the disasterous Tuesday.

Keating himself refused to endorse Goldwater during his campaign efforts to halt the growing political power of Robert Kennedy.

. . . GOLDWATER

lieves some candidates for Senate and governor would have been better off if they had supported the national ticket.

"You can't fight your party," he said.

He noted that the party had made "good gains" in the South and he told a questioner that while minor mistakes always come to mind "I can't think of any major mistake" in the conduct of this campaign.

The Arizona senator in referring to his future said:

UNEMPLOYED

"Being unemployed as of Jan. 3 I will have a lot of time to devote to the party. Now is the time to strengthen the Republican party. We not only have to work with the party, but as I said in my telegram to the president, we all must join together."

Goldwater did not slam the door on another bid for the presidency in 1968 but told a questioner that it is a matter for the party to decide and "as of now I would think that they probably would pick another man and as of now that would be okay with me."

Goldwater made it clear that he will not surrender the GOP to the forces which opposed him for the nomination. He said he thinks his defeat was "occasioned to some degree" by Republicans who did not share his views and, unlike GOP conservatives in past elections, "would not go out and work."

He said he did not view the election as a "repudiation" of his philosophy and said he did not feel that those in the party who oppose him will assume the leadership.

"I don't think we can build a Republican party on their concepts which are no different from the Democratic concepts," he said.

Goldwater urged members of the Republican party not to be despondent over their loss. He said "we still have a lot of work to do."

"After all, 25 million people is a lot," said the Arizona senator in reference to his popular vote tally.

BUILD MACHINE

Over the next four years, Goldwater said "we must build a machine to cope with the power of the Democrats."

He said that the election showed the difficulty of defeating an incumbent who wields the increasing powers in the White House. He specifically mentioned an incumbent president's "base of federal employees," his investigative power and his "power to control news."

In that connection, he said the columnists in the press hurt his cause but added that the "working press did a pretty good job" in its coverage of his campaign.

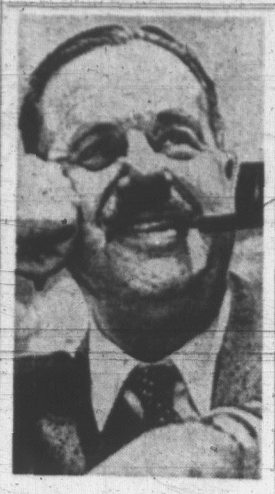
Goldwater said his immediate plans include "a rest some place" with his wife, Peggy, although they are not especially tired. He said he did not know where they would take their holiday.

After that interlude, he said, they face the problem of moving their personal effects from Washington to Arizona. After the move to his home state, he said, "we can make our plans."

TELEGRAM

"Congratulations on your victory. I will help you in any way that I can toward achieving a growing and better America and a secure and dignified peace. The role of the Republican party will remain in that temper but it also remains the party of opposition when opposition is called for. There is much to be done in Viet Nam, Cuba, the problem of law and order in this country and a productive economy. Communism remains our number one obstacle to peace and I know that all Americans will join with you in honest solutions to these problems."

Last night Goldwater's press secretary Paul F. Wagner explained that the Senator delayed his statement to the news media in order to analyze the election results with top advisors.



TIGHT VICTORY was scored by Republican Senator Hugh M. Scott in Pennsylvania over the Democratic challenger, Genevieve Blatt. A 'moderate' Republican, he won on split ballots, as President Johnson easily carried the state.

. . . LEADERS

if U.S. voters had put in a Republican administration.

While Russian and other Eastern European officials said they welcomed the U.S. choice, Western leaders saw the results as strengthening free world unity with a continued international detente.

CABLE CONGRATULATIONS

Governments round the world cabled Johnson congratulations.

Radio Moscow broadcast to the Russian people that an "overwhelming majority of Americans have resolutely rejected the program of leader of ultra-right forces, Senator Goldwater, the implementation of which would have been fraught with extremely dangerous consequences."

The world press also hailed the victory of Landslide Lyndon, as one paper put it.

The London Evening News said the American people had spoken "not only for America but for millions who knew that upon the outcome their whole way of life, or even their very lives, might depend."

In Bonn, West German Chancellor Ludwig Erhard said he was sure President Johnson would soon "personally make contact with America's European allies to discuss a common course of the free countries' policy."

Norwegian Prime Minister Einar Gerhardsen said in Oslo "the election result should mean that the United States will continue her foreign policy along the lines established during President Kennedy's three years in office. . . ."

Belgian Deputy Foreign Minister Henri Fayat said in Brussels that "this is a result which everyone who believes in democracy can welcome without reservation because the future of democracy in Europe is intimately linked to the fate of democracy in America."

As French newspapers splashed the results, Socialist leader Guy Mollet in Paris saw Johnson's victory as a strengthening of peaceful coexistence between East and West.

Even Portugal, which usually doesn't comment on the results of elections in other countries, felt compelled to congratulate Johnson in an official statement.

Indian Prme Minster Lal Bahadur Shastri also sent a congratulatory telegram to Johnson. Goldwater's platform was strongly disliked in Inda.

Christian Democrat Premier Aldo Moro of Italy cabled his congratulations from Rome on the confidence which the American people expressed to Johnson "in such large measure."

Asian leaders were among the first to react to the Johnson landslide.

Malaysian Prime Minister Tanku Abdul Rahman told reporters it was "a very, very good thing."

"I believe his policy of peaceful coexistence is going to ensure peace in this world, so long as it is accepted by others," Rahman said.

In Tokyo, the Japanese foreign ministry extended its "sincere congratulations" and expressed the belief that American-Japanese relations would be further strengthened.

Horseshoe Cheers Officials In City Hall Photo Finish

By JOHN MIKA

A horseshoe found by gardeners as they raked the patio outside the mayor's office became a symbol of hope this morning—hope that the official opening ceremony this afternoon would go well.

City Hall officials endured a nervous countdown for the ceremony as platoons of workmen hammered, sawed, glued and fitted dozens of last-minute items inside the new legislative wing even as the flags were unfurled, potted plants set down and chairs set up for the function.

SUN EMERGES

They had one major consolation—the bad weather of Tuesday broke and there was a good prospect of sunshine when Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes was scheduled at 3 p.m. to cut the ribbon and open the main door.

And the horseshoe was a small consolation too.

Gardeners hastily raking smooth the newly-dumped topsoil in the patio outside the mayor's office found an old, mud-caked horseshoe and passed it on to officials.

"Well, that's a good luck charm, isn't it?" asked one glum civic dignitary, grasping at some sign that order would arise from the confusion in time for the ceremony.

About 300 invited guests and hundreds more of the public were expected to attend the ceremony and see how it turned out.

Three U.S. Ships To Visit City Nov. 14 to 17

Three U.S. ships will visit Victoria between Nov. 14-17.

The coast guard cutter Klamath will dock in Victoria's Inner Harbor Nov. 14 for a one-day visit. She carries a crew of 15 officers and 116 enlisted personnel.

The same day, the destroyer USS McGinty will arrive at HMC Dockyard. She is commanded by Commander Donald E. Hughes and carries a complement of 15 officers and 175 enlisted men.

On Nov. 16, the cutter Mallow, with a company of six officers and 38 men, will tie up at Esquimalt.

. . . RECORD VICTORY

their decision in San Francisco last July to confront the voters with a conservative bearing no taint of "me-tooism." Goldwater had offered "a choice, not an echo," and the people had rendered a most one-sided verdict.

Johnson, who termed his victory a tribute to the murdered Kennedy, was now free to press forward with his promise to develop "a great society" at home and a stronger U.S. position abroad.

While Goldwater's defeat had been consistently predicted by public opinion polls almost since his nomination in July, the extent of Republican losses in the House of Representatives was the real shocker of the election.

The outcome of the battle for Congress did not mean Johnson was home free in winning passage of the controversial economic and social programs he deems necessary for realization of his "great society."

He still could expect hard fights on such issues as medicare. But the outcome did give him an unexpected measure of Democratic strength in the national legislature and he was expected to use all his famed powers of persuasion to swing it his way.

New Parley On Cambodia Soviet Aim

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union has called for a new Geneva conference to guarantee the neutrality and territorial integrity of Cambodia, the official news agency Tass said today.

The move by the new Kremlin leadership came in response to a telegram from Cambodian chief of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk about an air attack on Cambodia from South Viet Nam in which there was loss of human life and considerable material damage, Tass said.

"The Soviet government has called upon the government of the countries which signed the 1954 Geneva agreements on Indo-China to agree to the convocation of an international conference in Geneva to outline measures which could guarantee Cambodia's neutrality and territorial integrity," Tass said.

Yarborough Wins

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Senator Ralph W. Yarborough, Liberal Texas Democrat, was re-elected to his seat in Tuesday's election despite the fact the State's Democratic organization gave him little support.

Builder Convicted For Possession Of Stolen Unit

A 27-year-old builder was convicted in Colwood court today of being in possession of a piece of equipment stolen from a workman.

Albert Grice, 3260 Galloway, will be held in custody until Nov. 11 for sentence by Magistrate J. A. Byers.

Evidence showed Grice told one of his workmen to pick up a voltage booster belonging to another workman at a construction site where they were working.

Grice said he took the transformer home with him to prevent it from being stolen. But magistrate Byers said Grice kept it in his possession for one month and made no attempt to find its owner. He said the evidence showed Grice had no intention of returning it.

The magistrate remanded Grice until a pre-sentence report is obtained.

ISLAND DIGEST

Man Dies Before New Murder Trial

Brain Tumor Claims TB Victim Sentenced to Hang Year Ago

LADYSMITH — David Mitchell, granted a new trial after being sentenced to hang for the murder of his brother, died Tuesday in Vancouver General Hospital.

Mitchell, a resident of the Shell Beach Indian Reserve near here, had been admitted to hospital suffering from tuberculosis.

But Ronald Sampson, district Indian agent, was advised by the Indian affairs department in Vancouver Mitchell died of a brain tumor.

He had been charged with capital murder following the February, 1963, shooting of his brother on the reserve and sentenced to hang at the conclusion of the Nanaimo Fall Assizes in 1963.

The conviction was appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada, which ordered a new trial.

The new trial was scheduled to be heard at the 1964 Fall Assizes in Nanaimo but was postponed because of Mitchell's ill-health.

Magistrate, Accused Agree

DUNCAN—After turning his car over on the Trans-Canada Highway, Petty Officer Jeffrey Beaudry of Esquimalt, told police:

"This is what happens when you drink and drive."

In magistrate's court here Tuesday, Magistrate K. D. McAdam told Beaudry: "You should practice what you preach."

Beaudry was fined $150 and banned from driving for three months after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

The accident happened Monday afternoon.

HAND SIGNALS SIDE-TRACKED

LADYSMITH—A 140-year-old tradition died here this month.

Gone forever are the old hand, flag and lamp signals, mainstay of railroading language since the day the first engine chugged down the track.

Replacing them is the latest transistor, walkie-talkie radio. . . . The system has been introduced by Crown Zellerbach on their 22-mile, all-diesel logging railway.

It is one of the first rail systems—logging or commercial—to employ radio for engineer-brakeman communication.

★ ★ ★

In the past the brakeman has had to stand on top of the logs—sometimes 35 cars away from the engine—and signal with his arms to the driver.

Often it would take up to half a dozen tries before the driver finally stopped on the right spot.

At the same time, the brakeman was in a precarious position and it was not too uncommon for him to be toppled from his perch.

This sometimes resulted in serious injury or even death.

★ ★ ★

Now he can settle himself in a safe spot and tell the driver exactly how much further to back up. Fog, which in the past hampered operations, is no longer a worry.

Extension of radio to the railroad makes the company's logging business one of the most "in-touch" operations on the Island.

Everyone in the division is now in touch with someone else; the logging camp with the truck fleet; the tractor driver with his hauling supervisor and the logger on the hillside with the yarding machine by the roadside.

LT.-COL. ALLEN

Lonely Stand By Scottish 'B' Company

Nanaimo will have the only up-Island unit of reserve army troops under a complete reorganization announced in Ottawa Tuesday.

Troops at Duncan, Courtenay, Port Alberni and Campbell River will be moved to Victoria.

The only up-Island unit remaining will be B Company of the Canadian Scottish regiment at Nanaimo.

A squadron of the B.C. Regiment stationed at Nanaimo will be moved to Vancouver.

Companies of the Canadian Scottish at Duncan, Courtenay and Port Alberni will be shifted to Victoria.

A Canadian Scottish platoon at Campbell River will also come to Victoria.

Port Alberni Mayor Les Hammer said he wanted to protest the loss of his city's company of troops.

COLONEL SORRY

Lt.-Col. M. W. E. Allen, commanding officer of the Canadian Scottish in Victoria, said he was sorry the up-Island units were going, but he was pleased at the major role to be played by his regiment.

"The regiment looks forward eagerly to new roles and concepts within the reorganized militia and in the Victoria and Nanaimo area we will do everything to recruit up to strength."

A CULTURED HOOTENANNY

DUNCAN—Is a Hootenanny culture?

Cowichan School Board members were not sure Monday night.

They referred the question to a committee before deciding to lower the rental charge to Duncan Kinsmen.

The club wants to sponsor a Folk Song Festival in the local high school Nov. 28.

Thomas G. Rust has been appointed vice-president pulp and paper of B.C. Forest Products Ltd.

Mr. Rust's responsibilites will include the pulp and paper division at Crofton which is undergoing a major expansion program.

A graduate of Queen's University, Mr. Rust will live in Vancouver. He is married and has two children.

Colonel Named Magistrate At Salt Spring

FULFORD—Lt.-Col. Maurice Peiler, of Beddis Road, has been appointed magistrate and coroner for Salt Spring Island.

The retired officer will replace W. S. Anderson, of Ganges, as coroner and magistrate of the small debts and family and children's courts.

He will also replace Magistrate D. G. Ashby, who occasionally travelled to the island from Sidney to preside in local courts.

$3,190 Profit Marked Up By Exhibition

DUNCAN — Cowichan Exhibition made a profit this year of $3,190.

Exhibition directors Tuesday decided to spend $2,000 of the profit to pay for land bought three years ago at a cost of $6,000.

Despite the profit, the directors decided to increase admission fees next year from 75 cents to $1. Charge for children will still be 25 cents.

Higher labor cost was one reason given for the increase.

$5,325 IN PRIZES

The two-day fair paid out $5,325 in prize money, $3,317 going to entrants in the dairy and beef cattle, sheep and swine sections.

Over-all livestock entries at the exhibition were up on last year but beef cattle were down 13 per cent and swine entries dropped 45 per cent.

The question was posed—are Indian crafts dying out?

Figures show a 91 per cent drop in entries. Only four exhibitors entered, compared to 33 in 1963.

To offset this, entries in the junior section increased by 42 per cent with a 22 per cent rise of entrants.

Five Youths Face Charges in Morals Case

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Five youths from the Alberni were charged Tuesday with having sexual relations with a girl under 16, and additional charges of theft of property under $50 in value.

Charged were Thomas Livingstone, 20; Douglas Neuwirth, 20; Angus McGladrie, 18; Gerrit Seinen, 20, and Raymond Primeau, 19. Bail of $2,000 was set for Livingstone, Neuwirth, McGladrie and Seinen. Primeau did not appear in court.

Neuwirth was also charged with possession of stolen property.

Police said the charges were in connection with a Halloween incident involving a 15-year-old girl.

EGG MISSES, YOUTH FINED

DUNCAN—"Childish behavior such as this gives Halloween a bad name."

Magistrate D. K. McAdam said this Tuesday to a 16-year-old boy in juvenile court.

The boy admitted throwing an egg at a policeman Saturday night. He missed.

Charged under a city bylaw which bans the throwing of refuse, he was fined $20.

EGG BASH AVERTED

NANAIMO (CP)—Police said Monday they confiscated and eventually destroyed at least 29 dozen eggs Halloween night.

They said several carloads of youths had picked up the Grade "A" large eggs, apparently planning to throw them at pedestrians.

One car had 16 dozen, another had eight, a third four, and a fourth one. Others cars had handsfull.

CENTENNIAL IDEA STUDIED

Beaver Twin May Sail in '66

A replica of an historic ship may celebrate the centenary of the union of Vancouver Island and the rest of B.C. in 1966.

Deputy provincial secretary L. J. Wallace, head of B.C.'s committee planning celebrations for this and for Canada's centenary in 1967, said the idea is under consideration.

He said the ship would be a replica of the Beaver, a Hudson's Bay Co. vessel well-known in B.C. waters 100 years ago.

The Beaver was the first steamship to operate in the North Pacific.

It was chartered to the British admiralty for hydrographic surveys.

Mr. Wallace said the idea of a replica to sail round B.C. ports is one of dozens already received by centennial planners.

No question about it. This is an OLDER HOME.
BUT
- IT IS EXCEPTIONALLY WELL LOCATED—near good schools, near good bus service and generally in a good wholesome family environment.
- IT HAS MORE ROOM than most new homes—some 1,500 square feet—with living room 16x20, dining room 16x16 (!), large cabinet kitchen wired for range and three REALLY SPACIOUS bedrooms, all on one floor.
- The heating cost is LOWER than what you would expect. The taxes are certainly lower than what you would expect. The price is VERY MUCH LOWER than a new home of comparable size.
- And yet—because this residence has had a MAJOR RENOVATING job the UTILITY VALUE is THE SAME as in a NEW HOME. This VERY DESIRABLE property will sell quickly. BE SURE to see it TODAY.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

The best thing Wayne and Shuster have done in a couple of years was their appraisal of one of the world's greatest comics Monday.

The weekly Show of the Week presentation allowed the two comedians to trace the life, work and triumphs of W. C. Fields.

Stephen

The greatest comedies made by a single star were those of the bulbous-nosed one, who could conjure up a laugh with just a twitch of an eyebrow.

The film clips selected showed the aggressive self-propulsion of Fields to best advantage and proved that living or dead he is to be regarded as one of the immortals in the field of comedy.

Wayne and Shuster have also started a new trend in Canadian television entertainment with their biographical study of Fields. The presentation showed much research on their parts as well as mutual admiration of another comic.

Their studies of other comedians like the Marx Brothers will be seen as part of the Show of the Week format during the season.

The name of Fields brings to mind that Sunday, Nov. 15, NBC radio will broadcast a special 55-minute show which will feature excerpts from old Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy shows. Such talents as Mae West, Fred Allen, Rudy Vallee and Eddie Cantor will be highlighted along with the famous Charlie McCarthy feud with W. C. Fields.

Remember?

W. C. Fields: "McCarthy, I'm going to slice you into a Venetian blind."

McCarthy: "The thought makes me shutter."

W. C. Fields: "I never hated a kid so much since the day I was born. If you were sawdust on a bar room floor, I'd walk eight blocks for a chocolate soda."

McCarthy: "Fields . . . you weren't born. You were squeezed out of a bar room rag."

TIDBITS: NBC has requested re-entry rights into Moscow now that Khrushchev has been ousted as top banana in the Soviet Union.

The network was booted out of Moscow in February, 1963, after Communist displeasure over the documentary, "The Rise of Khrushchev". With the Soviet boss out of the way, NBC executive vice-president for news William McAndrew dispatched a wire to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromkyo seeking approval to establish an NBC Moscow bureau again.

Glynis Johns will appear on ABC-TV's "12 o'Clock High" on Nov. 13 as a wartime hostage. . . . Polly Bergen, Buddy Ebsen and Hugh O'Brian perform on Dinah Shore's variety hour for ABC Nov. 18.

'BILINGUAL, BICULTURAL, BINATIONAL'

By TERRY IZZARD

The "WEs" and "YOUs" sat down to lunch together on Tuesday.

The "YOUs" who outnumbered the "WEs" by about 60 to 1, quipped a few well-chosen phrases in French.

The "WEs" spoke fluent English.

An outsider would have said both groups were the same nationality.

According to Monsieur Lucien Saulnier he would have been wrong.

The "WEs" see Canada as "La Nation". The "YOUs" see it as "The Nation".

Chairman of the executive committee of the city of Montreal, M. Saulnier was in Victoria to tell Victoria Kiwanis "What Quebec Wants".

Throughout his speech he addressed his listeners as "you" and referred to Quebec and Quebecers as "we".

Listed among the "YOUs" were Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, Victoria Mayor R. B. Wilson, Chamber of Commerce president David Lawson and city manager Denis Young.

He told his audience: "You readily see in "the nation" the concept of Canada as a whole embodied in the institutions of central government and translated into citizenship and passports.

CLOSEST TO HOME

"As for us, we see in the term 'nation' the concept of French Canada and more especially that of Quebec, the entity that is closest to home for us."

One of the country's main features, he said, was the coexistence of two large communities so distinct and different in their individual cultures and languages that they formed two nations.

"French Canadians think that as a nation they can exist, flourish and prosper within a state or within a province not fully sovereign, provided it has some well-defined powers," he said.

MORE AWARE

French Canada, as a result of its economic resurgence and new contacts made with the world, has become increasingly aware of its own personality and identity.

Said M. Saulnier: "So unless we simply refuse to be realistic, there is no disputing the fact that a French Canadian nation exists—that Canada is not only bilingual or bicultural, but also binational."

From a jurisdictional point of view Quebec is no more nor less than one of the provincial states.

'SPECIAL CASE'

"But from cultural, social and political points of view—that is to say, from the point of view of fundamental values—Quebec is a special case . . .

"Not simply one of the 10 but the traditional home of one of our two national communities."

He urged the dropping of constant references to a superficial type of mutual understanding and meaningless vote-getting slogans and the substitution of . . . ". . . a loyal and fruitful partnership instead."

This way "we will eliminate the most important causes of friction that exist between us while opening the way to sound and beneficial co-operation."

IN FREEDOM

He said he would like to see a Canada where two national communities could attain full development in complete freedom; in their own languages and cultures; in terms of their essential characteristics, while being closely associated on the basis of a deep mutual respect, mutual confidence and common interests.

"Let us come out at last of our conservatism, of this climate of half-truths or half-lies.

'OUR CHALLENGE'

"And let us acknowledge together that a prosperous, viable, stable and confident Canada is something that cannot be achieved through timorous efforts and piece-meal corrections."

"In our own common interest and in the interest of generations to come, we owe it to ourselves to come out of this stagnation, this climate of patched-up relations and growing fear for our future . . .

"This is our challenge. Provided we meet it, the Canada of tomorrow will be and will endure," he concluded.

Garden Society Just Keeps Growing, Growing

One of Victoria's fastest-growing organizations is the Victoria Horticultural Society, Maj. George A. Wiggan, secretary, told an annual meeting of the society Tuesday.

Membership totals 647 compared to 287 10 years ago, he said.

Mrs. Ena McCabe was re-elected president, and Tom Wilson vice-president.

Directors include Mrs. R. S. Bevan, R. J. Eveleigh, W. J. Roper, Doris Page, Harry Parker and N. C. Powell.

SPECULATION IN FRANCE

Pompidou to Follow De Gaulle As Chief

PARIS (Reuters) — Speculation is growing here that President de Gaulle would like to see Prime Minister Georges Pompidou succeed him as head of state.

Pompidou handled affairs of state at home during the four weeks of De Gaulle's recent South American tour. This marked the president's longest absence abroad since he returned to power in 1958.

Constitutionally, the decision on the Fifth Republic's second president rests entirely with the French electorate. But there is no doubt that De Gaulle could raise massive popular support for Pompidou.

Some reports say De Gaulle has prepared a "political testment"—to be opened in the event of his death—naming the 53-year-old Pompidou as his choice to succeed him.

MAY RUN AGAIN

Another version comes from the weekly magazine Paris-Match. It says the general will run for re-eleetion next year and retire in 1967. He would then recommend Pompidou to the electors as his successor for the remaining five years of his term of office.

The magazine adds that this is why Pompidou in recent months has made more than a dozen visits to the French provinces, making speeches and mixing with the people.

Speculation on Pompidou's future has also been sparked by his place in the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the First World War battle of the Marne. He stood by De Gaulle's side in an open car to greet the crowds.

Critics of Pompidou say he is not a political force and does not enjoy the support of the ruling Gaullists Union for the New Republic.

ENJOYS SUPPORT

But at the union's annual congress top Gaullist Jacques Chaban Delmas told Pompidou publicly: "We count on you tomorrow and for the future."

A brilliant academic career led Pompidou through the Ecole Normale Superieure, summit of France's highly selective scholastic system, and into the teaching post he held at the outbreak of the Second World War.

Pompidou became a member of De Gaulle's personal staff after the liberation in 1944. When the general went into political exile in 1947, Pompidou continued to work closely with him. In 1952, although continuing this association, he began a business career with Rothschilds bank.

From De Gaulle's return to power in 1958 until January, 1959, Pompidou was his chief personal assistant. He then returned to Rothschilds until becoming prime minister in April 1962.

Pompidou is married and has one son. His hobby is growing roses.

Author Strikes Back Against TV 'Image'

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP)—Betty Friedan, author of a controversial book on the role of women in modern society, attacked the "image makers" of television for perpetuating the idea of American woman as "dreary, mindless drudges."

Mrs. Friedan, whose book The Feminine Mystique has sold nearly 700,000 copies, told a lecture audience of more than 700 Monday night:

"The current image of the North American housewife on television is that of a dreary, mindless little drudge whose greatest ambition in life is to get the kitchen sink clean and white.

"And even then, there is the insinuation that she needs some kindly, older man to help her get it clean."

The U.S. writer maintains in her book (published in 1963) that women are being prevented from achieving fulfillment in their lives by the existance of a "mystique" which implies that they can only achieve this fulfillment as wives and mothers.

Mrs. Friedan said she had questioned "the image makers" of American television before writing her book to find out why there weren't more feminine social workers, teachers, doctors and lawyers in TV dramas and family shows.

"They said women only wanted to watch men on television.

'PAINT PICTURE'

"The producers painted a picture of thousands of housewives across the country sitting in front of their television sets with repressed sexual needs—which could only be satisfied by the appearance of young, single men (for the young married women who were bored with being alone all day in suburbia) and older men for the middle-aged housewife."

This sort of an image is the cause of the "fantastic self-denigration of women which keeps them from achieving what they could easily do," she said.

"The major thing that the women of today have to fear is their own fear of the new role, the new complexity of their lives."

Mrs. Friedan, during the wide-open question session at the end of her talk, answered queries on a wide variety of problems.

On "intellectual superiority" of women, she said: "I doubt very much if we are ever going to prove superior to men. If women get out into the world and accept their responsibilities instead of living as parasites off men, then both men and women will be able to accept their abilities realistically."

And on current fashions for the teen-aged dolls now popular with sub-teen girls: "I think hey're obscene. The part oft el the whole tragedy of forcing little girls into a travesty of feminine sexual behaviour before they are even aware of such things."

Mrs. Friedan, who has three children, is a journalist and a former clinical psychologist.

Square Dance Etiquette Remains Same

By MARGE GILROY

Many of the formalities of ballroom dancing are not carried over to the more folksy square, but simple dance etiquette is called for on any floor.

Members of the Vancouver Island Wesern Square Dance Association were reminded in the last issue of "Cross Country News" that it is still the gentleman who asks the lady for a dance, or when trading partners, approaches the other gentleman in proposing the switch.

And of course it is only courtesy to return your partner to the sidelines.

Square dancers are allowed to forget their worries as they dip and dive around the hall, but not their manners.

SCHEDULE

Schedule for this week is:

RECOUNT RESULTS SUBMITTED

Official results of the Oct. 24 by-election in Saanich were received and filed by council Monday night.

The results, after an official recount, indicated candidates received votes as follows:

Council: William Campbell, 2,652; Harry Shergold, 1,272; Edward Ball, 1,044; Donald Mathison, 1,003; Robert Fleming, 647; E. H. Olson, 409.

Reeve: Hugh Curtis, 3,579; Edward Baum, 3,452; Lewis Haut, 146.

ESQUIMALT MOTHER NAMED TO REPRESENT BEREAVED

Mrs. E. Margaret Bird of 470 Head Street will represent the bereaved mothers of British Columbia at the annual Remembrance Day service at Victoria Cenotaph next Wednesday, Nov. 11, at 10:45 a.m.

Her son, Robert Francis Bird, was killed while flying over Germany with the RAF on Jan. 17, 1943. She will honor his memory—and the memory of all Canada's war dead—by placing a wreath on the cenotaph at the close of the service.

Wreaths will also be placed by Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes, heads of the three armed services, the RCMP, the Red Cross, the IODE, the women's auxiliaries, representatives of the federal and B.C. governments, the churches and the city and municipalities of Greater Victoria.

Veterans of the two world wars and the Korean conflict will march to the Cenotaph with men of the armed services and cadet corps at 10:30 a.m.

NADEN BAND

The service this year will be conducted by Rev. A. W. Gollmer. The band of HMCS Naden will lead the singing of the hymns O Valiant Hearts and The Silent Tribute and Laurence Binyon's famous word, "They shall grow not old," will be recited by Clem Gill, secretary of the Pro Patria Branch, Royal Canadian Legion.

Members of the Canadian Scottish Pipe Band will play the lament, Flowers of the Forest.

After the sounding of The Last Post and the singing of the National Anthem, the lieutenant-governor will take the salute at a march past the Empress Hotel.

OTHER SERVICES

Similar observances will take place throughout Greater Victoria.

In Saanich a service will be held at Peace Memorial Gore Park, Shelbourne Street, at 2:30 p.m. Prayers will be offered by Rev. Harry Pike of the Church by the Lake and Padre Douglas Kendell of the Veterans' Hospital, and music will be provided by Mount Douglas Secondary School Band, conducted by Robert Bergeson.

Walter Cownden will be master of ceremonies.

MEMORIAL PARK

In Esquimalt, Archdeacon A. E. Hendy will conduct a service in Memorial Park opposite the municipal hall at 10:45 a.m.

Commodore H. A. Winnett, RCN, will take the salute at a march past.

The Oak Bay remembrance service at the war memorial in Uplands Park at 1 p.m. will be conducted by Rev. Alexander Calder, Rev. H. J. Jones and Rev. R. O. Wilkes.

In case of rain the service will take place in St. Phillip's Anglican Church, Eastdowne Road.

Race Hatred Campaigns Uncovered?

TORONTO (CP) — The Telegram Monday published an interview with a 51-year-old man who, it says, plans racial hatred campaigns from an isolated Hariburton farmhouse near the village of Gooderham.

The story, by reporter Frank Jones, says the man is John Ross Taylor, co-leader of the Canadian Union of Fascists in the 1930s and a defeated candidate in the last Ontario election for Social Credit Action.

During an interview at the farmhouse, the story adds, the man told the reporter:

1. He is the agent for the booklet, the Red Rabbi, which th attorney-general's department is investigating.

2. He is the Canadian agent for the Thunderbolt, a U.S. racist paper banned from the Canadian mails.

3. He is working on a series of pamphlets attacking prominent Canadian Jewish leaders.

The story adds that he told the reporter he had been converted to fascism in the 1930s "after I had been looking for the answer for eight years."

42 Cadets To Weekend In Seattle

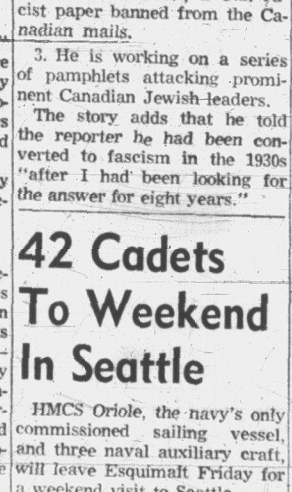
HMCS Oriole, the navy's only commissioned sailing vessel, and three naval auxiliary craft, will leave Esquimalt Friday for a weekend visit to Seattle.

Boarding the Bermuda-rigged ketch and the YMT-10, YFP-312 and YFP-320, will be 42 officer cadets from HMCS Venture, the short service officer training plan establishment at HMC Dockyard.

FIRST TASTE

For most of the officer cadets, it will be their first taste of life at sea. They make up about half of the cadets under training at Venture.

While at sea, the cadets will undergo training in pilotage, navigation, officer-of-the-watch manoeuvres, signal flag hoisting and radio voice procedures.



Commentator on foreign affairs, Wilson Woodside will speak on "The Winds of Change in Russia" at the Women's Canadian Club, Nov. 12, at 2:30 p.m. and the men's luncheon, Nov. 13, at 12:15 p.m. Both meetings will be held in the Empress Hotel. Mr. Wilson is best known as a writer, speaker and television personality and at one time was editor of Saturday Night. This past summer Mr. Woodside revisited Russia after an absence of 30 years.

CHARLOTTETOWN VISITOR

New 'Stratford' Envisaged Here

The idea man behind Canada's Confederation Centre in Charlottetown looked around Victoria Centennial Square Tuesday.

"It's wonderful," he said.

Dr. Frank MacKinnon was here to speak to the Men's and Women's Canadian Clubs.

But after his talks he still had time before catching an overnight flight for Edmonton.

So he popped down to City Hall to call on Mayor R. B. Wilson whom he last saw several years ago.

The mayor called McPherson Playhouse director Robert Ellison and the three set off on a tour.

Dr. MacKinnon compared the project with the $5,600,000 centre in his hometown and said: "Victoria is going to benefit from this just like Charlottetown has done."

He was impressed by the playhouse and quipped: "Victoria can be the Stratford of the west; we'll be the Stratford of the east."

850 SEATS

The city's theatre is much like the theatre in the Confederation Centre in size. The McPherson will have 850 seats, its counterpart in the east holding 1,000.

Dr. MacKinnon forecast a great change in the city's outlook as a result of the theatre.

"It will attract no end of people. There is a great future here, especially with the tourist trade.

"There will be no end of scope for having a summer festival. And these festivals if they are well done attract theatre-goers from all over the country.

"You are in a tremendous position here.

"The atmosphere's going to be lovely."

COLLEGE PRINCIPAL

Dr. MacKinnon is principal of the Prince of Wales College in Charlottetown.

A music and art fan, he first put forward the idea for a Confederation Centre and then harrassed politicians and people with influence for years until his dream became reality.

The centre was opened earlier this year by the Queen.

New Air Policy Nearing Reality

An integrated international air policy for Canada will be closer to reality within a few weeks, deputy transport minister John Baldwin said Tuesday night.

Three principles for the development of a civil aviation policy, outlined at the Air Transport Association meeting here, include:

- No competition on international air routes;
- Domestic services and routes designed to ensure a debt-free operation for Air Canada; and
- Establish a reasonable role for regional air lines to allow them the opportunity to operate without government subsidies.

"Before many weeks have passed," Mr. Baldwin said, "the transport minister will find himself in a position to carry these three principles even further in a more detailed statement of objectives and lines of growth."

The principles were approved by the government last spring and stressed co-operation rather than competition.

He said that discussions between Air Canada and Canadian Pacific Air Lines have not led to a solution of overlapping routes overseas.

Transport Minister Jack Pickersgill was prepared to allow a reasonable time for discussion but if they don't result in agreement "he is prepared to take steps to solve these difficulties," he said.

The new association president, R. G. Lefrancois of Montreal, president of Nordair Limited, said the government's principles "contribute to the proper approach to the problems we are faced with."

Other officers elected by directors included: W. G. Bracken, Toronto, co-ordinator of aviation sales; Al Michaud, Vancouver, vice-president; Jack Scholefield, Montreal, treasurer; and J. E. Nickson, Montreal, secretary.

A telegram was read to delegates from Mayor Dick Parkinson of Kelowna inviting them to hold their 1966 convention in that Okanagan city. Next year's convention will be held in the east.

Jews Protest Troop Training

TORONTO (UPI)—The United Jewish People's Order has sent a stiff protest to Defence Minister Paul Hellyer after hearing that German troops would train in Canada, it was disclosed today.

In a letter made public here, the order said the arrival of German troops in Canada "cannot be excused by any experiment, or by the needs of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization."

The organization said it had learned from a group of war veterans in Winnipeg that soldiers of the West German army would train at Camp Shilo, Man., this winter.

VIEW ROYAL MERGER DELAYED

Esquimalt council has delayed voting on a request by View Royal panhandle residents to join the municipality.

Said Reeve Alfred C. Wurtele after a discussion of the merger in committee Monday: "It is a very complex matter and we want to be quite sure before we ask the people of Esquimalt to take on the commitment."

The question will probably be brought up again at the next council meeting.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Barry Jarvis, age 11, of Vancouver, B.C., Canada, for his question:

What Is the Life Cycle of the Spider?

Most spiders live an active life only from spring until the chilly weather of late fall. In a few months they earn all the skills of spidercraft and become adults, they hand on life to a new generation of spiders, they grow old and then die. Certain spiders survive through several seasons, but the life span of the average spider is short.

So far science has identified almost 50,000 different spider species, and others, no doubt, are waiting to be named and classified. Some are no bigger than pinheads, and the giants of the clan are as large as furry mittens. Different species, of course, follow different plans for coping with life in the spider world. But all of the eggy little fellows are meat-eating hunters or trappers. And every spider begins his life cycle as a tiny round egg.

Most of the spiders we see around are females—and if a lady spider were bigger, she would be more fearsome than a tiger. She is always ready to pounce upon a small victim and never hesitates to attack and devour any tiny crawler within her reach. She even devours other spiders. The fact that the spider is a cannibal plays a part in the life cycle of the leggy little beast.

The male spider is smaller than the female, and when he goes courting a female he is very cautious. He may dance and prance around to win her approval—but he keeps at a safe distance until he is sure that she is not annoyed. Many a male spider gets a leg bitten off by a female who takes a dislike to him. Many unpopular suitors are even eaten.

Insects Eat Eggs

The female prefers to live her busy life in solitude. She lays a clutch of small round eggs and uses her web-making thread to encase them in a silken sac. The little grey pouch looks for all the world like a pixie-sized bag of marbles. The egg sac is hidden under stones or leaves or secured near the web. The wolf spider carries her egg sac until the youngsters hatch.

The young spiders are miniature copies of their parents, and they grow by molting their skins. If they hatch in spring, the spiderlets soon go forth to cope with the world. But if the eggs hatch in the fall, the leggy midgets may stay in the nest all winter. In this case, the stronger spiderlets often feed upon their weaker brothers and sisters.

As a rule, a mother spider lays a batch of eggs in the spring and another in the fall. There are 40 to 100 eggs in each clutch—but few of them will become adult spiders. Most of the youngsters are eaten by hungry insects or by other spiders. In cold winter climates most adult spiders perish at the end of summer. The next generation usually spends the chilly months in the egg stage, and the baby spiders do not hatch until spring.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK—It's an old story—but around B'way we still like it.

There's a tall, slim, beautiful, 21-year-old dancer named Nina Wayne at the Latin Quarter . . . who didn't attract great attention among those bustaceous beauties at first because she's a bit Audrey Hepburnish.

Then she was picked to do a dance in Van Johnson's act . . . and people began noticing that she looks like Jackie Kennedy.

We wrote about her just a week ago . . . Nina went on the Johnny Carson show a couple of nights later . . . Producer David Swift of Screen Gems, watching from Hollywood, gave her a contract to film a TV pilot, and she's given her notice at the Latin Quarter and will fly to LA in a few hours. It all happened in a week. She has the best wishes of the girls who are much bustier.

Nina, a Chicagoan, formerly in the Ice Capades, may have got her break because of her Johnny Carson interview. He asked her how she felt walking around on stage without clothes and she said:

"Naked."

Mickey Hargitay — Jayne Mansfield's ex-muscle-man husband—must be the last of the gallants. Mickey told me in Lindy's (en route to Italy to do two movies) that in the divorce, "I gave Jayne everything, though under the California community property law we could have split it. I didn't have to give her everything, but I wanted to." One of Mickey's advisers urged him to take half, but Mickey insisted on giving her his all, financially. "I devoted eight years of my life to her and I enjoyed it," said Mickey. As I've been saying, Jayne must have something.

"Empty Baked Potato Shells"—the skins, as we used to call them in God's country (Ohio) . . . are now served as a crispy side dish delicacy at Danny's Hideaway, with the "insides" sold separately as mashed potatoes . . . "Earl Wilson's New York" has been translated into German: the prosperous Germans are the big travellers nowadays . . . Donna Hamilton Fifield, one-time Hollywood starlet and dressing roommate of Marilyn Monroe at 20th C-F in Hollywood, now publishes the English language tab., the Paris Gazette, and it's selling like hot crepes suzettes . . .

Sean Connery, alias James Bond, told me he had ulcers at 18—the result, he believes, of joining the British Navy, "where I was never allowed to question anything I was told to do." He was discharged because of the ulcers and, says he, "I've never had ulcers since."

THE MIDNIGHT EARL . . . Anthony Quinn phoned Jerry the Barber (on Madison Av.) from Greece, asking him to fly over and trim his hair. (Jerry told him, "You know I charge a dollar extra for house calls") . . . Rex Harrison's son Noel was signed for Kim Novak's "Moll Flanders" film . . .

"The Entertainers" TV'er is still having bad luck. Imogene Coca, who replaced ailing Carol Burnett last week, broke an ankle. And Gwen Verdon, replacing her this week, said at Le Valois she'd injured a leg. (Who sponsors it—Blue Cross?) . . . Groucho Marx was signed to do a British TV series . . . Libby Holman, away from show business for years, will do a singing tour of the college campuses . . . Victor Spinetti, star of "Oh, What a Lovely War," is a favorite for the lead opposite Liza Minnelli in "Roman Holiday."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Noting all the English rock 'n' roll groups, Chuck Barnett asks, "What did we put in those Bundles for Britain in the '40s—guitars?"

WISH I'D SAID THAT: It's a good thing the election is over—the candidates were beginning to run out of promises.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "It's a funny thing about life. If you refuse to accept nothing but the best, you very often get it." Somerset Maugham.

Miss Canada Contestants In Rehearsal

TORONTO (CP)—Contestants for the Miss Canada Pageant of 1965 have arrived in Toronto to begin a routine of rehearsals, receptions and competitions before the final decision is made Sunday night.

The 20 contestants, who are billetted with chaperones in a closely guarded wing of the Royal York Hotel, will compete for the title of Miss Canada which was won by Carol Ann Balmer of Toronto last year.

There will be a 2½-hour stage show at the O'Keefe Centre both Friday and Saturday night including preliminary swimsuit, evening gown and talent contests.

The judges' final decision will be made late Sunday night at the theatre.

The contestants include the following from Western Canada: Linda Douma, 20, Sidney, B.C.; Judy Lee Holmes, 21, Edmonton; Kari Jonassen, 19, Calgary; Margaret Smith, 20, Winnipeg; and Sherrill Thompson, 21, Vancouver.

UN Parley Dec. 1

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary - General U Thant made it official Monday — the UN General Assembly will open Dec. 1, after two postponements. It was to have opened Sept. 18.

Earthquake Probe Set for California

PASADENA, Calif.—A two-year study aimed at learning how to predict earthquakes will start soon in an area believed overdue for a major shock.

Scientists from the California Institute of Technology plan a $400,000 project in which dozens of instruments will be installed along the 650-mile-long San Andreas fault—a huge crack in the earth's crust running three-fourths of the length of California.

Scientists believe land on the west side of the fault is moving northward about two inches a year. Strains between the two faces have been building up for more than a century and authorities expect a major shock—disastrous if in a populous area—at any time.

Scientists plan to measure precisely the extent of this land movement and learn whether tremors too small to be detected with existing instruments may be daily relieving the accumulating strain and postponing any major shock.

Dr. Clarence Allen, professor of geology, says:

"We do not expect that at the end of two years we will be able to predict earthquakes, but we do hope that the results of our work will point toward promising fields of research that will eventually lead to this end."

Johnson's Record Victory Crushes Goldwater Forces

ACCOMPANIED by Sen. Ralph Yarborough, President Johnson shakes hands with workers at Democratic campaign headquarters in Austin, Tex., Tuesday night. Yarborough won re-election. (AP Wirephoto.)

Major Gains In Congress By Democrats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lyndon Baines Johnson scored history's greatest presidential victory today and proclaimed his determination to "make this nation whole again" after one of the bitterest campaigns of modern times.

His avalanche of votes buried the hopes of Republican Sen. Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona that Americans were ripe this year for a return to conservatism.

In Phoenix, Ariz., Goldwater telegraphed congratulations to the president and offered his help "toward achieving a growing and better America and a secure and dignified peace."

But Goldwater also made it clear that he and his followers were not abondoning the political arena. He said they would keep fighting to make the Republican party the vehicle for a conservative victory later on.

Johnson carried with him into power an overwhelmingly Democratic congress.

In a victory statement issued some nine hours before Goldwater formally conceded defeat, Johnson interpreted the election results as "a mandate for unity" and a command "to move forward toward peace and a better life for all of our people."

The Democratic sweep carried new faces into congress, but it was not uniformly overpowering.

It apparently saved the Ohio senate seat of Stephen M. Young, who held a narrow lead in a see-saw battle with his GOP challenger, 46-year-old Robert Taft Jr.

But it was unavailing for Sen. Pierre Salinger in California who was defeated for a full term by actor George Murphy, Republican.

In New York, Robert Kennedy managed to defeat veteran Republican senator Kenneth Keating, but was far below Johnson's record total in the state.

Johnson said he looked on his election as an opportunity to heal the campaign wounds of the U.S.

Earns White House In Own Right

For the 56-year-old former school teacher from Texas it was a triumph consonant with his dreams. A year ago he had inherited the office of President from a martyred President. But now he had earned the White House in his own right.

He won this testament from the people in an election which shattered established voting patterns.

Goldwater, candidate of the party of Abraham Lincoln, won five states in the traditionally Democratic south and his native Arizona.

But Johnson won all the rest — 44 states and the District of Columbia.

The five southern states won by Goldwater were Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, and South Carolina.

The tide of votes which swept Johnson to victory also gave his party its greatest majority in the House of Representatives since the peak election performance in 1936 of his mentor and idol, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Johnson's landslide enveloped Vermont, which had never voted Democratic before; the industrial east, the farm belt, the mountain states, the west coast, Alaska, and Hawaii.

It encompassed suburbs which normally vote Republican and rural regions which in the past have been distrustful of Democrats.

With 270 electoral votes needed to win, Johnson received the clinching returns from his home state when Texas gave him its 25 electoral college votes at 10:11 p.m. EST.

From then on his victory increased in magnitude until he had captured well over 61 per cent of the total popular vote, a margin greater than FDR's greatest.

With 95 per cent of the precincts reported, Johnson had won 45 states with 486 electoral votes; Goldwater had won five states with 47 electoral votes and was ahead in one state with five electoral votes for an indicated total 52.

The Democrats had won 290 seats and were leading in six others for an indicated total of 296 in the new Congress—a gain of 39. The Republicans had captured 135 and were ahead four races for an indicated total of 139. The makeup of the 88th Congress was 257 Democrats and 178 Republicans.

Republicans Gain One Governor

In the Senate, the Democrats took 27 seats. Coupled with 40 holdovers this would give them an indicated 67—one more than in the last session. The Republicans had won seven seats and were ahead in one for an indicated strength of 33.

In the 25 governorship contests, the Democrats had won 17. With their 16 holdovers, they now total 33 governors—a net loss of one. The Republicans won eight gubernatorial races. With their nine holdovers, this gave them 17.

The election left the Republicans divided and shaken after

DAVIE VS. JOHN

Tories Fear Party Clash

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—A head-on clash between the leaders of the B.C. and federal Conservative parties appeared inevitable today as a result of drastically opposed views on patriation of the constitution.

The clash is certain to further increase Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker's inter-party problems and weaken his already deteriorating political position.

The vast differences in attitude between Diefenbaker and E. Davey Fulton, the leader of the B.C. Conservative party, were revealed today in a confidential memorandum from Fulton to federal Conservative leaders.

The former justice minister argued in his memorandum that the Liberal party's constitutional amendment formula does not alter in principle or effect the amending formula proposed by the Conservatives in 1961.

Diefenbaker, however, has been arguing strongly against the latest amendment formula on the grounds that it delegates too much power to the provinces.

Diefenbaker and some editorial writers argue that the formula delegates too much power to the provinces by permitting them to encroach too much on Ottawa's jurisdiction over matters hitherto exclusive to it.

But Fulton strongly disagrees with this argument in his confidential memo, which is being leaked to the press by Ottawa Conservatives.

After making five-page comparison of the 1961 Conservative formula and the latest Liberal formula, Fulton concludes that the two formulas do not differ in principle or effect.

Canuck Shot By Mistake On Cyprus

NICOSIA (CP) — Canadian troops in Cyprus suffered their first shooting casualty today when a Greek-Cypriot soldier mistook a Canadian Guardsman for a Turkish-Cypriot and fired a machine-gun at him, wounding him in the forearm.

Gdsmn. J. B. Muise, 34, of Picton, Ont., father of eight children, suffered a flesh wound in the early-morning incident in the Greek-Cypriot sector near the famed Green Line across this divided capital. He was reported in good condition in hospital this afternoon.

Armed Forces Junta Rules In Bolivia

LA PAZ (AP)—President Victor Paz Estenssoro was overthrown in a military revolt in Bolivia today and fled the country.

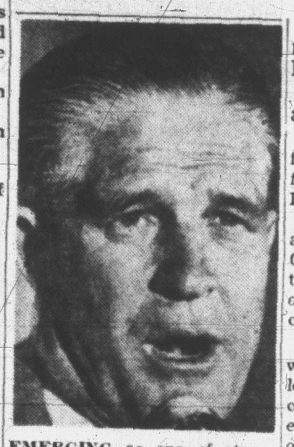
Gen. Alfredo Obando Candia, armed forces commander, announced he had taken over the government as head of a military junta.

He pledged to retain power as briefly as possible and to call new elections.

He said Paz Estenssoro had brought trouble upon himself by fostering a constitutional amendment which permitted him to be elected to a second consecutive term last May.

Paz Estenssoro resigned to avoid bloodshed, Obando said.

'No Bitterness'—Barry; Wires Congratulations



EMERGING as one of strong men in Republican party is Governor George Romney who survived Johnson landslide in Michigan to win another term. Romney is a Republican "Moderate" who was cool to the candidacy of Barry Goldwater.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater wired his congratulations to President Johnson today and offered his help "toward achieving a growing and better America and a secure and dignified peace."

"I say to the president as a fellow politician he did a wonderful job . . . he did a good job and I have congratulated him on it."

In a telegram which he read at his press headquarters here, Goldwater said, however, that the GOP "remains the party of opposition when opposition is called for.

"There is much to be done with Viet Nam, Cuba, the problem of law and order in this country, and a productive economy. Communism remains our number one obstacle to peace and I know that all Americans will join with you in honest solutions to these problems," Goldwater said.

Reading the telegram at his press headquarters Goldwater told newsmen he has "no bitterness or rancor" as a result of the election.

'DISAPPOINTED'

"I am surprised at the figures of this election, they did not reach the numbers that turned out in the 1960 election. I am disappointed that not more voters turned out," said Goldwater.

Asked about the defeat of candidates for Congress and governorships around the U.S., Goldwater said he has not had a chance to look at these totals. He said, however, that he be-

ELECTED, BUT HIDING

NEW YORK (AP) — Representative Adam Clayton Powell, subject to arrest in New York any day but Sunday, voted an absentee ballot in Tuesday's election.

Powell, a Democrat, was seeking re-election in Harlem to an 11th term.

Two warrants for his arrest have been issued for his refusal to pay $46,500 in a slander judgment.

'RIGHT CHOICE'

World Leaders Hail LBJ

By REUTERS

The world appeared in unusual agreement today that the American people had made the "right choice" in overwhelmingly returning Lyndon B. Johnson as president of the United States.

In general, many world leaders expressed relief that Republican candidate Barry Goldwater and his extreme right-wing followers didn't make it to the White House.

The only voice of dissent at the results came from Nationalist China, where officials privately expressed disappointment at the Republican senator's defeat.

Many Nationalist Chinese favored Goldwater because they felt the Chiang Kai-shek regime might have had a freer hand to strike against Communist China

'BIND UP OUR WOUNDS,' SAYS JOHNSON

Huge Barbecue for a Huge Victory

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Lyndon B. Johnson planned a joyous Texas-style reunion with his election running-mate today, and asked all Americans to "bind up our wounds and to make this nation whole."

Vice-President-Elect Hubert Humphrey and Mrs. Humphrey were to fly down from Minneapolis, where they spent Tuesday night, for a huge mid-day barbecue at the LBJ ranch on the banks of the Pedernales River.

Other than that relaxing feast, the presidential plans were still unannounced.

Riding the wavecrest of votes that swamped Republican opponent Barry Goldwater, Johnson made an early morning appearance at the Municipal Auditorium in nearby Austin.

The main note he sounded, in a voice hoarse and soft, was that "there are many more things in America that unite us than divide us."

He asked Americans to "face the world as one" and called the election result "a mandate for unity, for a government that serves no special interest—no business government, no labor government."

Elected overwhelmingly and in his own right, Johnson pledged his administration "will be a government that provides equal opportunity for all and special privileges for none. It is a command to build on those principles and to move forward toward peace and a better life for all of our people.

MOSCOW VISIT SET BY CHOU

Magic Name of Kennedy Sweeps Bobby to Senate

NEW YORK (UPI)—The familiar and apparently magic name of Kennedy was back in the forefront of Democratic party politics today as Robert F. Kennedy celebrated a smashing victory in his first bid for elective office.

Although he was unable even to vote for himself, Kennedy convinced an overwhelming number of New York State voters that he was the right man for them—and not just a "carpetbagger" or political opportunist.

With nearly all of the state's record number of votes counted, the 38-year-old Kennedy appeared headed for a 600,000 vote plurality over his Republican opponent, Sen. Kenneth B. Keating. This would give him a greater victory in the state than that registered in 1960 by his brother, the late president John F. Kennedy, who won by 384,000.

BOBBY KENNEDY
. . . no carpetbagger

Despite his victory, Kennedy ran far behind President Johnson's record-breaking pace in the empire state. Over a million voters in the state split their ballots to vote for Johnson and then crossed to the Republican column to vote for Sen. Keating.

The president rolled up an all-time-high plurality of nearly 2,400,000 votes in New York. He became the first presidential candidate in the state's modern history to capture every county, many of them rock-ribbed Republican strongholds.

But Kennedy still won in nearly every part of the state—in New York City, the suburbs and in upstate rural areas. He overcame a partial defection by voters in the Jewish sections of New York City, where Keating ran about 10 per cent better than he had six years ago.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1964—PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

Under the terms of the federal student loan designed to ease the needy undergraduate's rough road through university, the boy or girl whose bid is accepted may draw up to $1,000 a year for a $5,000 total.

Six months after the student graduates, or discontinues his studies, Ottawa applies interest at 5.75 per cent to the sum borrowed, payment to be made in equal monthly installments over a period of from five to 10 years.

The applicant must prove a definite need.

He must also show that he has the qualifications necessary to pursue a university degree.

Kelly, the gutsy boy whose pride I've tried to spare through an alias, finds himself skewered on that last clause.

He has won acceptance as a freshman at a university recognized under the Loan Act. But that same university, in a judgment confirmed by British Columbia loan headquarters at UBC, has denied him federal aid.

This on the ground that his capabilities as a student have been judged marginal.

★ ★ ★

Although he has lost too much weight, Kelly is still a tough and husky specimen. Out with his timber cruiser boss in the Quatsino Inlet area, he worked in all weathers.

He can handle an 85-pound pack in mountain country.

Through much of the past five years, his home has been a tent or bunkhouse at the end of nowhere.

His campus clothes, bought two years ago, are still good, but he isn't sure what he'll do when his shoes wear out, and most of the time, he's hungry.

Through a rough grade 12 year, and now as a Uvic freshman, he has clung to a belief based on what he's seen, heard and experienced in the woods. This is that without specialized education, he will never win a place as a master forester in the B.C. timberlands.

The realization didn't come overnight. While it was forming, Kelly, still in his teens, spent his pay without thought for the morrow.

The result was that when in September of 1963 he began to ready himself for college through a repeat year of high school, it was with belt pulled tight. He was knocked off one job list as 'unreliable'—this, he maintains, because workcalls frequently came while he was in his forenoon classes.

He swamped groceries in a supermarket. A war veterans' association to which Kelly will be forever grateful, helped him with a cash assist.

★ ★ ★

Today at 21, he is just possibly the number-one hardship case of our Canadian universities . . . a distinction which both he and Victoria can get along handsomely without!

His skinny budget was blown sky-high by expenses he hadn't foreseen when he drew it up so confidently.

Apart from an occasional 60 cents an hour as a sitter, he has managed to earn about $12 in a store. Other students lend him the books he lacks when they can spare them.

He still has his car, which is currently running on fuel bought by students to whom he lends it. They leave an extra gallon or two in the tank.

At this point in his first year at our spanking new university, I am not making book on how things will turn out for Kelly, academically or any other way.

He insists, though, that he will not quit.

"When I came to that place," he says of UVIC, "I knew I'd found what I needed."

And at that place, if the flesh doesn't prove weaker than the stubborn spirit, Kelly means to stay.

★ ★ ★

His 1963-64 record, achieved under conditions anything but ideal for study, is a pass with a top rating of 'B'. It is not distinguished . . . not at all the sort they reward with scholarships or bursaries . . . but it did open a university's doors to Kelly.

On the strength of that same acceptable record, I think Kelly deserves another, and more thoughtful hearing of his request for a student loan.

I hope, should a review be denied, that some angel in the shape of a company, organization or great-hearted individual will grubstake him until Christmas and — if he passes those first weeding-out exams — through to next spring.

"If I can make it this year," he says earnestly, "I'll have four months in the woods to earn my next."

Victoria, how about it?

Crofton Site Favored For Chemical Project

$4 Million Proposal By Leading Company

By FRANK RUTTER

An international chemical firm is planning a $4 million Vancouver Island plant, probably at Crofton.

Officials of the Electric Reduction Company of Canada Ltd., announced today they are studying the location for an Island plant.

It would supply the Island's rapidly growing pulp and paper industry with sodium chlorate.

At the same time, Resources Minister Ray Williston said B.C. Hydro will provide new transmission facilities to bring power to the plant.

EXPANSION

As an interim measure to meet a heavy demand for chemicals in the pulp and paper industry, Erco officials announced a $2 million expansion of the company's existing plant in North Vancouver.

G. W. Mitchell, the firm's chlorate division manager, said Erco is conducting a comprehensive survey of its Island plans.

JUNE DECISION

A decision is expected by next June.

The plant would be in production by 1967.

Under study are final location, although Crofton is favored, and the method of distribution of sodium chlorate—liquid or solid.

Mr. Mitchell described the market for the product as "rather staggering".

It is used for bleaching pulp.

The company already supplies about 4,500 tons a year to B.C. Forest Products Crofton plant.

The new chemical factory would supply the mill to be built for $60 million at Gold River by the Tahsis Company, Mr. Mitchell said.

The chemical plant would produce about 20,000 tons of chemical a year.

The cost would be at least $4 million, he said.

Mr. Mitchell said Erco has already obtained satisfaction from B.C. Hydro that sufficient power will be available for the new factory.

Mr. Williston said Hydro is considering several possibilities, including conversion of existing transmission lines from alternating current to direct current.

24 HOURS

He described the chemical plant as a very high user of power, as it operates 24 hours a day every day of the year.

Mr. Mitchell said he was "enthusiastic" about the prospects for an Island chemical factory.

His firm, which also has a plant at Buckingham, Que., is a subsidiary of Albright and Wilson Ltd., of London.

"We congratulate them on taking the foresight to be there with products at the time the products are going to be required," Mr. Williston said.

It will mean the forest industry does not have to bear additional costs of bringing chemicals from outside B.C., he said.

PEARSON READY

Rathie Sure Of Subsidy For Transit

Mayor William Rathie of Vancouver, here for the official opening of City Hall, said today that Prime Minister Pearson enthusiastically supports a plan for subsidized urban transit in Canadian cities.

Mayor Rathie is chairman of a committee established by the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities to seek a Canadian counterpart to the new U.S. program of federal and state subsidies for mass transit systems in urban areas.

The move is seen as a more desirable alternative to the unending construction of freeways through the hearts of large cities which only increases traffic density.

"I have spoken to the prime minister twice about this and he is most enthusiastic — I don't think we'll have any problem there," said Mayor Rathie.

EARLY NEXT YEAR

He said the campaign for reaching agreement among the municipal, provncial and federal levels of government on a subsidy program will go into full swing early next year.

"We'd like to see the municipal elections all across the country out of the way before we really start to move on the discussion stage," he said.

The Public Utilities Commission hearings on the transit authority's applicaton are scheduled to resume in Vancouver Monday with the municipalities presenting their case against the requested increase.

NEW COMMANDER of Esquimalt-based ocean escort HMCS Beacon Hill is Lieut.-Cmdr. William Andrew Hughes of Kingston, Ont. He entered the navy as a cadet in 1944 and served in ships and establishments of the RCN and RN, specializing in anti-submarine warfare. Lieut.-Cmdr. Hughes was staff officer to the naval member, Canadian Joint Staff, London, England, before taking command of the Beacon Hill.

Fog-Confused Hunter Walks Out of Woods

A search for a Victoria hunter in the Shawnigan Lake area was called off today when he walked out of the woods.

James Clifford Moffat, 108 Glentana, had been missing since noon Tuesday.

After getting a lift into Port Renfrew on a logging truck he phoned his wife Joyce to tell her: "I'm all right.

LOST IN FOG

"I got lost in the fog and had to sleep the night under a tree."

When he eventually hit the Port Renfrew Road, the 26-year-old longshoreman was several miles from the point where he last saw his friend.

The friend, who is visiting the family from Calgary, reported Mr. Moffat missing Tuesday night.

Police, game wardens and friends from Victoria went into the bush at dawn today.

Mrs. Moffat drove to Port Renfrew to meet her husband who said he was suffering only from cold and dampness.

William Head Expanding To Hold 175

The minimum security penitentiary at William Head is being enlarged to accommodate 175 men instead of 140 as at present, an offical said today.

The prison has been in operation since 1959—and is regarded as one of the most successful in Canada.

"British Columbia leads the nation in the percentage of prison population which can be safely entrusted to minimum security institutions such as William Head," Alan J. MacLeod, federal commissioner of penitentiaries, said in Vancouver Tuesday.

"Research is under way to determine why criminals in B.C. make better prisoners than those in other parts of Canada."

25% SAFE

Mr. MacLeod said 15 per cent of the national prison population can be usefully assigned to minimum security penitentiaries. But the percentage in B.C. is 25 per cent.

He added that the B.C. penitentiary at New Westminster will probably be closed at some future date after a new composite unit at Matsqui is completed.

"Jails without bars are working well," said Thomas Hall, western regional director of penitentiaries and former warden of the B.C. penitentiary.

If there are no bars there can be no escapes, he added, although there were a number of "walkaways" from William Head and the Agassiz Work Camp when the experiment was first undertaken.

Mr. Hall said there have been no "walkaways" from either William Head or the Agassiz camp for 18 months.

Full Airing Asked In 'Battle of Beds' At City Hospital

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A public meeting to bring together all sides in the Royal Jubilee Hospital dispute was proposed today.

"I think this is a worthwhile step," said hospital administrator George Masters. "We have nothing to hide."

The public affairs group of Victoria Chamber of Commerce will recommend such a meeting to the chamber's executive, which can accept or reject the recommendation.

Hospital administration officials and board directors, doctors, nurses and Health Minister Eric Martin would be invited.

The recommendation was reached after an hour's discussion by the public affairs group this morning.

At the meeting, Mr. Masters said 14 graduate nurses have left Jubilee in the past week and they are "very difficult to replace."

Hundreds of dollars had been spent advertising for qualified nurses across the country and in the United Kingdom with little response.

B.C. hospitals in general had a greater shortage of nurses this summer than in the last 15 years.

MORE SCHOOLS

He thought there should be some government leadership towards more schools for nurses and more assistance to hospitals to train more nurses.

There was a "radical" shortage of nursing schools and the Jubilee has a waiting list of girls wanting to take up nurse training.

The hospital employs many part-time nurses but there was a limit to how many could be taken on.

He also reported the difference between B.C. nurses' salary and that of other provinces is down about $10 or $15 a month. In B.C., a graduate nurse starts at $340 a month increasing to $400 in about four years.

HEALTH COMMISSION URGED

Doctor Wants End To Political Rule

The whole field of provincial health should be controlled by a non-partisan commission instead of politicians, a Victoria doctor said today.

Dr. D. M. Whitley, chief of medical staff at Royal Jubilee Hospital, issued the latest broadside in the controversy over vacant beds in the hospital.

He said he had nothing personal to say about Health Minister Eric Martin, but the present health administration gives him "almost dictatorial powers."

"The whole problem should not lie in the control of a political party," he said.

"There should be an independent commission of hand-picked men of high integrity."

Dr. Whitley suggested such a commission could be composed of medical, hospital and business representatives, with the know-how of operating a venture on sound economic lines.

He said the present system means that unqualified men are running the affairs of public health.

Dr. Whitley also called for a conference between medical staff from his hospital and Mr. Martin.

NO REPLY

He said such a meeting was sought by the doctors last May in a letter to Mr. Martin, but there had been no reply.

"If we can't get together and resolve our problems, I suppose there would have to be a public inquiry," he said.

"I don't know if this is the answer but it could be."

Dr. Whitley said his only concern was as a medical man trying to cure his patients.

As such, he was disturbed because there is space for more beds in his hospital, he said.

Woman, 77, Keeps Bag; Snatcher Runs

A youth tried to snatch a handbag from a 77-year-old woman as she walked along Douglas Street Tuesday night with her 72-year-old brother.

Miss Mary Wright, 150 Douglas, held on to her bag and wouldn't let go even when she fell down on the ground in the scuffle.

The prowler, described as about 16 years old and well dressed, fled. The incident occurred near South Park School.

Miss Wright's brother, Reginald Porter, took her to St. Joseph's Hospital where she was given a checkup for bruises and police were called.

Burglar Fails In Attempt On Store Safe

An amateur safecracker made a half-hearted attempt to crack the safe at Champion's Ltd., 905 Fort, overnight Tuesday.

He broke into the furniture store by a rear window and attacked the safe. He succeeded only in breaking the dial.

City police said the burglar gave up and left without taking anything from the store.

O'Grady Finished As Counsel For Purchaser

B.C. government purchasing commissioner G. E. P. Jones is currently without a defence lawyer and without a date for trial on charges of accepting favors from a car dealer.

City lawyer T. P. O'Grady said he is no longer acting for Mr. Jones, after carrying his defence through a preliminary hearing.

Two other lawyers who were asked to take the case to a higher court are also unable to appear for Mr. Jones—Douglas McK. Brown and T. P. Dohm, both of Vancouver.

Former Liberal MLA George Gregory of Victoria has been asked to conduct the Jones defence, but his decision will depend upon the date of the trial.

Earliest possible date is next Monday in County Court before Judge M. T. Drake.

Also under consideration is Dec. 10.

Teacher Ready To Seek Election

Another candidate has tentatively entered the Saanich municipal election race.

School teacher Pat Thomas, 32, of 1922 Wende, says he is considering standing for council.

Three seats will be up for election on December 12.

Driver Thrown From Pickup

A 64-year-old man suffered head injuries when thrown out of a pickup truck in a collision on rain-swept streets at Douglas and Queens Tuesday afternoon.

Norman Nelson, 1751 Kings, is in satisfactory condition today at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

City police said Mr. Nelson was apparently going south on Douglas and turning on to Queens when he was in collision with a car driven by Dennis Perkins, 1065 San Marino.

Johnson's Record Victory Crushes Goldwater Forces

ACCOMPANIED by Sen. Ralph Yarborough, President Johnson shakes hands with workers at Democratic campaign headquarters in Austin, Tex., Tuesday night. Yarborough won re-election. (AP Wirephoto.)

Major Gains In Congress By Democrats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lyndon Baines Johnson scored greatest presidential victory in U.S. today and proclaimed his determination to "make this nation whole again" after one of the bitterest campaigns of modern times.

His avalanche of votes buried the hopes of Republican Sen. Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona that Americans were ripe this year for a return to conservatism.

In Phoenix, Ariz., Goldwater telegraphed congratulations to the president and offered his help "toward achieving a growing and better America and a secure and dignified peace."

But Goldwater also made it clear that he and his followers were not abondoning the political arena. He said they would keep fighting to make the Republican party the vehicle for a conservative victory later on.

Johnson carried with him into power an overwhelmingly Democratic congress.

In a victory statement issued some nine hours before Goldwater formally conceded defeat, Johnson interpreted the election results as "a mandate for unity" and a command "to move forward toward peace and a better life for all of our people."

The Democratic sweep carried new faces into congress, but it was not uniformly overpowering.

It apparently saved the Ohio senate seat of Stephen M. Young, who held a narrow lead in a see-saw battle with his GOP challenger, 46-year-old Robert Taft Jr.

But it was unavailing for Sen. Pierre Salinger in California who was defeated for a full term by actor George Murphy, Republican.

In New York, Robert Kennedy managed to defeat veteran Republican senator Kenneth Keating, but was far below Johnson's record total in the state.

Johnson said he looked on his election as an opportunity to heal the campaign wounds of the U.S.

Earns White House In Own Right

For the 56-year-old former school teacher from Texas it was a triumph consonant with his dreams. A year ago he had inherited the office of President from a martyred President. But now he had earned the White House in his own right.

He won this testament from the people in an election which shattered established voting patterns.

Goldwater, candidate of the party of Abraham Lincoln, won five states in the traditionally Democratic south and his native Arizona.

But Johnson won all the rest — 44 states and the District of Columbia.

The five southern states won by Goldwater were Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, and South Carolina.

The tide of votes which swept Johnson to victory also gave his party its greatest majority in the House of Representatives since the peak election performance in 1936 of his mentor and idol, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Johnson's landslide enveloped Vermont, which had never voted Democratic before; the industrial east, the farm belt, the mountain states, the west coast, Alaska, and Hawaii.

It encompassed suburbs which normally vote Republican and rural regions which in the past have been distrustful of Democrats.

With 270 electoral votes needed to win, Johnson received the clinching returns from his home state when Texas gave him its 25 electoral college votes at 10:11 p.m. EST.

From then on his victory increased in magnitude until he had captured well over 61 per cent of the total popular vote, a margin greater than FDR's greatest.

With 95 per cent of the precincts reported, Johnson had won 45 states with 486 electoral votes; Goldwater had won six states with 52 electoral votes.

The Democrats had won 290 seats and were leading in six others for an indicated total of 296 in the new Congress—a gain of 39. The Republicans had captured 135 and were ahead four races for an indicated total of 139. The makeup of the 88th Congress was 257 Democrats and 178 Republicans.

Republicans Gain One Governor

In the Senate, the Democrats took 27 seats. Coupled with 40 holdovers this would give them an indicated 67—one more than in the last session. The Republicans had won seven seats and were ahead in one for an indicated strength of 33.

In the 25 governorship contests, the Democrats had won 17. With their 16 holdovers, they now total 33 governors—a net loss of one. The Republicans won eight gubernatorial races. With their nine holdovers, this gave them 17.

The election left the Republicans divided and shaken after

DAVIE VS. JOHN

Tories Fear Party Clash

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—A head-on clash between the leaders of the B.C. and federal Conservative parties appeared inevitable today as a result of drastically opposed views on patriation of the constitution.

The clash is certain to further increase Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker's inter-party problems and weaken his already deteriorating political position.

The vast differences in attitude between Diefenbaker and E. Davie Fulton, the leader of the B.C. Conservative party, were revealed today in a confidential memorandum from Fulton to federal Conservative leaders.

The former justice minister argued in his memorandum that the Liberal party's constitutional amendment formula does not alter in principle or effect the amending formula proposed by the Conservatives in 1961.

Diefenbaker, however, has been arguing strongly against the latest amendment formula on the grounds that it delegates too much power to the provinces.

Diefenbaker and some editorial writers argue that the formula delegates too much power to the provinces by permitting them to encroach too much on Ottawa's jurisdiction over matters hitherto exclusive to it.

But Fulton strongly disagrees with this argument in his confidential memo, which is being leaked to the press by Ottawa Conservatives.

After making five-page comparison of the 1961 Conservative formula and the latest Liberal formula, Fulton concludes that the two formulas do not differ in principle or effect.

Armed Forces Junta Rules In Bolivia

LA PAZ (AP)—President Victor Paz Estenssoro was overthrown in a military revolt in Bolivia today and fled the country.

Gen. Alfredo Obando Candia, armed forces commander, announced he had taken over the government as head of a military junta.

He pledged to retain power as briefly as possible and to call new elections.

He said Paz Estenssoro had brought trouble upon himself by fostering a constitutional amendment which permitted him to be elected to a second consecutive term last May.

Paz Estenssoro resigned to avoid bloodshed, Obando said.

EMERGING as one of strong men in Republican party is Governor George Romney who survived Johnson landslide in Michigan to win another term. Romney is a Republican "Moderate" who was cool to the candidacy of Barry Goldwater.

'No Bitterness'—Barry; Wires Congratulations

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater wired his congratulations to President Johnson today and offered his help "toward achieving a growing and better America and a secure and dignified peace."

"I say to the president as a fellow politician he did a wonderful job . . . he did a good job and I have congratulated him on it."

In a telegram which he read at his press headquarters here, Goldwater said, however, that the GOP "remains the party of opposition when opposition is called for.

"There is much to be done with Viet Nam, Cuba, the problem of law and order in this country, and a productive economy. Communism remains our number one obstacle to peace and I know that all Americans will join with you in honest solutions to these problems," Goldwater said.

Reading the telegram at his press headquarters Goldwater told newsmen he has "no bitterness or rancor" as a result of the election.

'DISAPPOINTED'

"I am surprised at the figures of this election, they did not reach the numbers that turned out in the 1960 election. I am disappointed that not more voters turned out," said Goldwater.

Asked about the defeat of candidates for Congress and governorships around the U.S., Goldwater said he has not had a chance to look at these totals. He said, however, that he be-

'RIGHT CHOICE'

World Leaders Hail LBJ

By REUTERS

The world appeared in unusual agreement today that the American people had made the "right choice" in overwhelmingly returning Lyndon B. Johnson as president of the United States.

In general, many world leaders expressed relief that Republican candidate Barry Goldwater and his extreme right-wing followers didn't make it to the White House.

The only voice of dissent at the results came from Nationalist China where officials privately expressed disappointment at the Republican senator's defeat.

Many Nationalist Chinese favored Goldwater because they felt the Chiang Kai-shek regime might have had a freer hand to strike against Communist China

'BIND UP OUR WOUNDS,' SAYS JOHNSON

Huge Barbecue for a Huge Victory

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Lyndon B. Johnson planned a joyous Texas-style reunion with his election running-mate today, and asked all Americans to "bind up our wounds and to make this nation whole."

Vice-President-Elect Hubert Humphrey and Mrs. Humphrey were to fly down from Minneapolis, where they spent Tuesday night, for a huge mid-day barbecue at the LBJ ranch on the banks of the Pedernales River.

Other than that relaxing feast, the presidential plans were still unannounced.

Riding the wavecrest of votes that swamped Republican opponent Barry Goldwater, Johnson made an early morning appearance at the Municipal Auditorium in nearby Austin.

The main note he sounded, in a voice hoarse and soft, was that "there are many more things in America that unite us than divide us."

He asked Americans to "face the world as one" and called the election result "a mandate for unity, for a government that serves no special interest—no business government, no labor government."

Elected overwhelmingly and in his own right, Johnson pledged his administration "will be a government that provides equal opportunity for all and special privileges for none. It is a command to build on those principles and to move forward toward peace and a better life for all our people."

Magic Name of Kennedy Sweeps Bobby to Senate

NEW YORK (UPI)—The familiar and apparently magic name of Kennedy was back in the forefront of Democratic party politics today as Robert F. Kennedy celebrated a smashing victory in his first bid for elective office.

Although he was unable even to vote for himself, Kennedy convinced an overwhelming number of New York State voters that he was the right man for them —and not just a "carpetbagger" or political opportunist.

With nearly all of the state's record number of votes counted, the 38-year-old Kennedy appeared headed for a 600,000 vote plurality over his Republican opponent, Sen. Kenneth B. Keating. This would give him a greater victory in the state than that registered in 1960 by his brother, the late president John F. Kennedy, who won by 384,000.

BOBBY KENNEDY
. . . no carpetbagger

Despite his victory, Kennedy ran far behind President Johnson's record-breaking pace in the empire state. Over a million voters in the state split their ballots to vote for Johnson and then crossed to the Republican column to vote for Sen. Keating.

The president rolled up an all-time-high plurality of nearly 2,400,000 votes in New York. He became the first presidential candidate in the state's modern history to capture every county, many of them rock-ribbed Republican strongholds.

But Kennedy still won in nearly every part of the state—in New York City, the suburbs and in upstate rural areas. He overcame a partial defection by voters in the Jewish sections of New York City, where Keating ran about 10 per cent better than he had six years ago.

ROUND-A-BOUT

By DOUGLAS HILLSIDE

Italian authorities go to great lengths to prevent the nation's art treasures from being exported.

Their stringent requirements put Victoria artist Margaret Peterson in an uncomfortable position when it came time to ship home from Ravenna a new mural for University of Victoria McPherson library. (We ran a picture of it on the front page of The Times on Tuesday).

Artist Peterson

The glass mosaic, commissioned for $1,700 ("a tremendous bargain" to pleased Uvic planners), complements the building's massive concrete exterior panels made by Vancouver sculptor George Norris.

All arrangements for its shipment, duty-free, were made well in advance of completion. But such are the "trials, tribulations and indignities suffered by an itinerant artist," Miss Peterson wrote home, that she had to declare the mural was not a great art treasure before Italian customs men would release it.

Victoria minister Rev. Albert E. King tells of the bride who was nervous about remembering what she had to do at the wedding ceremony. The minister told her:

"There are only three things to remember — the aisle you walk up, the altar at the end of it, and the bridegroom."

Later, as she walked into the church, the bride was heard muttering to herself in what sounded like an ominous tone:

"Aisle altar him!"

Goldstream Park naturalist Freeman King has had his summer season extended this year to include duty weekends during the salmon run.

"I've spoken to about 300 people in the last three weekends," Skipper said, "and, you know, it's surprising the number of people who go out to see the salmon and don't see them.

Naturalist King

"Also, I'm amazed by the ignorance of many people on the habits and general knowledge of salmon."

Skipper is park guide during the tourist season, but is always happy to take a nature lover over the many trails that wind through the woods and along the lakes and beaches of Greater Victoria.

Salmon running in Goldstream now are mostly coho, he said. They fight their way about two miles upstream as far as the second falls in the campsite.

"I'm looking into reports of salmon running in Colquitz River," Skipper added. "It's the first time I've heard of any in quite a few years."

Leading Polls Predicted Sweep

NEW YORK (AP)—Pre-election political polls predicted correctly President Lyndon B. Johnson's smashing presidential victory over his Republican opponent, U.S. Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona.

The two national polls, the Gallup poll and the Harris poll, each had given Johnson 64 per cent of the popular vote and Goldwater 36 per cent.

Samuel Lubell, whose report does not include percentage figures, predicted a "Johnson landslide." With 95 per cent of the vote counted, Johnson had about 61 per cent.

In 1936, Franklin D. Roosevelt obtained 60.8 per cent of the popular vote. In 1920, Warren G. Harding captured 60.4 per cent.

They were the only two candidates since 1900 to win more than 60 per cent of the overall vote.

Castro 'Not Unhappy' With New Defections

HALIFAX, N.S. (UPI)— The Communist government of Cuban Premier Castro "gained in every way" by the massive weekend defection of 44 Cubans at Gander, Nfld., Cubans here said Tuesday.

The sources say the Castro government will not curtail passenger flights through Gander despite the fact that the defection brought to more than 200 the number of Cubans to use Gander as an escape airport.

'THREE-WAY CURE'

The Cubans say Gander is too strategic an airport for Castro to quit, but emphasize even more that "Castro privately advocates defections as a three-way cure to Cuban problems."

(In Newfoundland, the defectors were grounded at Gander and Stephenville by a snowstorm but all were expected to fly late Tuesday to Halifax where they will formally apply for entry to the United States.

POOL RESOURCES

Cornell University in the U.S. and Australia's University of Sydney are to pool more than $13,500,000 worth of space exploration equipment, and interchange staffs.

The Cubans admit the defections cost Castro in political prestige, but say he is willing to pay the propaganda price because:

● Passenger flights give Castro a source of dollar currency urgently needed to trade with western countries such as Canada and Great Britain.

● Cuba's economy continues to deteriorate with food and housing critically short and "the more that leave, the more of these the Communists will have for Cubans who stay."

PGE Strike Vote

Sweeping Changes For ARDA Studied

TORONTO (CP) — Forestry Minister Sauve said Tuesday the federal government has asked the provinces to approve far-reaching amendments to the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act to make the legislation more effective from 1965 to 1970.

He told the Ontario Federation of Agriculture that the amendments are designed to correct deficiencies in the ARDA program, a joint federal-provincial effort to help rural areas suffering from low incomes and lack of opportunity for economic development.

Mr. Sauve said the current ARDA agreement will terminate at the end of April. He said a draft proposal for a new agreement for 1965-70 now is being considered by the provinces and will be discussed in detail at a federal-provincial conference in Montreal in late November.

The minister said he could not discuss the draft proposal in detail but could outline the general concepts on which the proposal is based.

These were that the ARDA program should emphasize land use adjustment, including the consolidation of low-income farms, that new steps must be taken to aid regions which suffer from extreme conditions of social and economic disadvantage, and that a program be undertaken to re-establish farmers in areas of extreme poverty and poor resources.

"These are ambitious programs," Mr. Sauve said. "If they are to be successful, it must be on the basis of inter-departmental co-operation and planning in both federal and provincial governments, with due co-ordination between federal and provincial governments."

The statements were included in the text of a speech issued to the press before delivery.

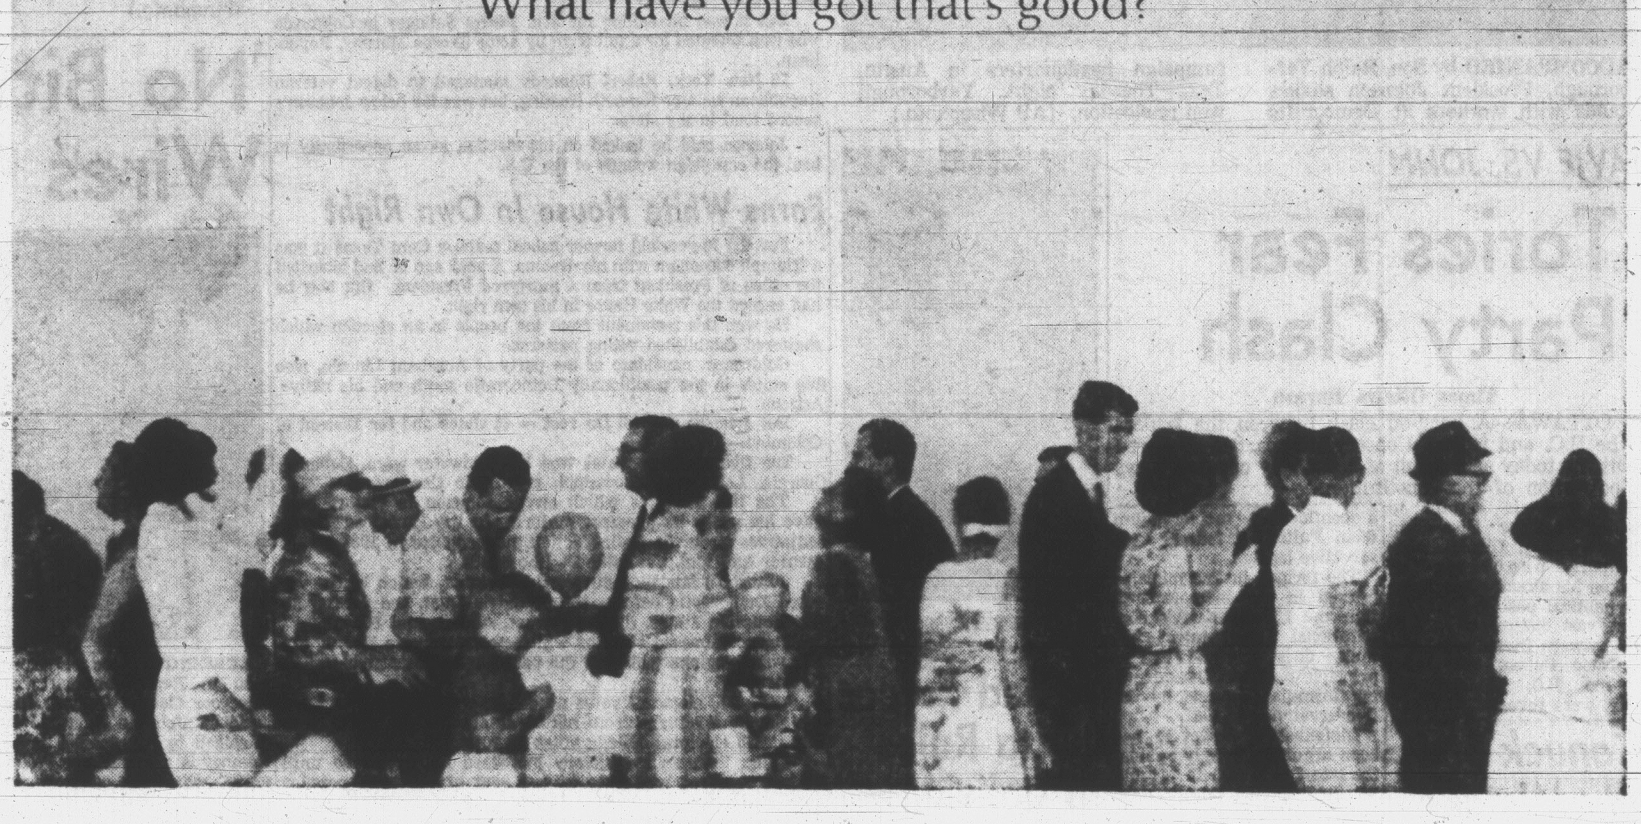
expo67 will have 30,000,000 customers ready for you

What have you got that's good?



Yes, we're talking to you, Mister (and Mrs. and Miss) "Average Reader". And we're talking to tinkers, tailors, butchers, bakers. And we're talking to the president and the sales manager of the Monumental Giant Corporation, Inc.

We want anybody with a worthwhile product or service to write us so they might benefit from EXPO '67—The Universal and International Exhibition at Montreal, April 28 to October 27, 1967.

This great, history-making enterprise in which Canada will act as host to the world offers YOU a once in a lifetime opportunity to play a role commensurate with your importance in the Canadian community.

We're talking about:

1. Products and services that could bear the emblem or name of the World Exhibition and be sold or distributed throughout Canada and the world. For these the market is bounded only by the reach of your imagination. To make and distribute them you must have a license. We are anxious to award these licenses.

2. Products and services that could be sold at our World Exhibition. For these there will be a market of 30 million people—the estimated total attendance of the Exhibition. To sell them, you must make arrangements for a Concession at the Exhibition. These we are anxious to grant. What products? What services? Concessions cover four broad fields:

Restaurants; Transportation and Parking; Amusement area; and a wide range of General Concessions including souvenirs, handicrafts and general merchandise to be sold in shops and boutiques, to Services such as shoe-shine parlors, lockers, hairdressing salons and other facilities which must be provided at a World Exhibition.

Most of all we're talking about products and services that we haven't even thought of yet—but maybe you have. Naturally we are interested in the BEST products and services and in those whose experience and knowledge in their respective fields will help us the most.

We'd like to hear from all those who are interested right now. We won't be able to act immediately in every area, but we promise to reply immediately, and discuss the matter further just as soon as we can. Please write to Mr. Nathan Steinberg, Administrator of Concessions and Licensing, Canadian Corporation for the 1967 World Exhibition, 1 Place Ville-Marie, Montreal, Quebec, to learn more about our concessions and licensing program.

Democrats Score Sweeping Victory

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lyndon Baines Johnson scored the greatest presidential victory in U.S. history today and proclaimed his determination to "make this nation whole again" after one of the bitterest campaigns of modern times.

His avalanche of votes buried the hopes of Republican Sen. Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona that Americans were ripe this year for a return to conservatism.

In Phoenix, Ariz., Goldwater telegraphed congratulations to the president and offered his help "toward achieving a growing and better America and a secure and dignified peace."

But Goldwater also made it clear that he and his followers were not abandoning the political arena. He said they would keep fighting to make the Republican party the vehicle for a conservative victory later on.

Johnson carried with him into power an overwhelmingly Democratic congress.

In a victory statement issued some nine hours before Goldwater formally conceded defeat, Johnson interpreted the election results as "a mandate for unity" and a command "to move forward toward peace and a better life for all of our people."

The Democratic sweep carried new faces into congress, but it was not uniformly overpowering.

It apparently saved the Ohio senate seat of Stephen M. Young, who held a narrow lead in a see-saw battle with his GOP challenger, 46-year-old Robert Taft Jr.

But it was unavailing for Sen. Pierre Salinger in California who was defeated for a full term by actor George Murphy, Republican.

In New York, Robert Kennedy managed to defeat veteran Republican senator Kenneth Keating, but was far below Johnson's record total in the state.

Johnson said he looked on his election as an opportunity to heal the campaign wounds of the U.S.

Earns White House In Own Right

For the 56-year-old former school teacher from Texas it was a triumph consonant with his dreams. A year ago he had inherited the office of President from a martyred President. But now he had earned the White House in his own right.

He won this testament from the people in an election which shattered established voting patterns.

Goldwater, candidate of the party of Abraham Lincoln, won five states in the traditionally Democratic south and his native Arizona.

But Johnson won all the rest — 44 states and the District of Columbia.

The five southern states won by Goldwater were Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, and South Carolina.

The tide of votes which swept Johnson to victory also gave his party its greatest majority in the House of Representatives since the peak election performance in 1936 of his mentor and idol, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Johnson's landslide enveloped Vermont, which had never voted Democratic before; the industrial east, the farm belt, the mountain states, the west coast, Alaska, and Hawaii.

It encompassed suburbs which normally vote Republican and rural regions which in the past have been distrustful of Democrats.

With 270 electoral votes needed to win, Johnson received the clinching returns from his home state when Texas gave him its 25 electoral college votes at 10:11 p.m. EST.

From then on his victory increased in magnitude until he had captured well over 61 per cent of the total popular vote, a margin greater than FDR's greatest.

With 95 per cent of the precincts reported, Johnson had won 45 states with 486 electoral votes; Goldwater had won six states with 52 electoral votes.

The Democrats had won 290 seats and were leading in six others for an indicated total of 296 in the new Congress—a gain of 39. The Republicans had captured 135 and were ahead four races for an indicated total of 139. The makeup of the 88th Congress was 257 Democrats and 178 Republicans.

In the Senate, the Democrats took 27 seats. Coupled with 40 holdovers this would give them an indicated 67—one more than in the last session. The Republicans had won seven seats and were ahead in one for an indicated strength of 33.

In the 25 governorship contests, the Democrats had won 17. With their 16 holdovers, they now total 33 governors—a net loss of one. The Republicans won eight gubernatorial races. With their nine holdovers, this gave them 17.

The election left the Republicans divided and shaken after

Tories Fear Party Clash

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—A head-on clash between the leaders of the B.C. and federal Conservative parties appeared inevitable today as a result of drastically opposed views on patriation of the constitution.

The clash is certain to further increase Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker's inter-party problems and weaken his already deteriorating political position.

The vast differences in attitude between Diefenbaker and E. Davie Fulton, the leader of the B.C. Conservative party, were revealed today in a confidential memorandum from Fulton to federal Conservative leaders.

The former justice minister argued in his memorandum that the Liberal party's constitutional amendment formula does not alter in principle or effect the amending formula proposed by the Conservatives in 1961.

Diefenbaker, however, has been arguing strongly against the latest amendment formula on the grounds that it delegates too much power to the provinces.

Diefenbaker and some editorial writers argue that the formula delegates too much power to the provinces by permitting them to encroach too much on Ottawa's jurisdiction over matters hitherto exclusive to it.

But Fulton strongly disagrees with this argument in his confidential memo, which is being leaked to the press by Ottawa Conservatives.

After making five-page comparison of the 1961 Conservative formula and the latest Liberal formula, Fulton concludes that the two formulas do not differ in principle or effect.

AT DIEF'S REQUEST

Fulton said in Quebec City today the memorandum was prepared at Diefenbaker's request and was not intended for publication.

"I didn't regard it as something for publication, but apparently somebody turned it over to the press," he said.

He said copies of the memorandum had been handed to some former Conservative cabinet ministers and some Conservative MPs.

Diefenbaker received the Fulton memorandum before he spoke at a Toronto Conservative meeting Monday.

In his speech Monday Diefenbaker charged that the Liberal formula not only drastically altered the terms of the "Fulton formula" on which it was based, but opened the door to balkanization of Canada into 10 separate and almost independent states.

Canuck Shot By Mistake On Cyprus

NICOSIA (CP) — Canadian troops in Cyprus suffered their first shooting casualty today when a Greek-Cypriot soldier mistook a Canadian Guardsman for a Turkish-Cypriot and fired a machine-gun at him, wounding him in the forearm.

Gdsmn. J. B. Muise, 34, of Picton, Ont., father of eight children, suffered a flesh wound in the early-morning incident in the Greek-Cypriot sector near the famed Green Line across this divided capital. He was reported in good condition in hospital this afternoon.

ELECTED, BUT HIDING

NEW YORK (AP) — Representative Adam Clayton Powell, subject to arrest in New York any day but Sunday, voted an absentee ballot in Tuesday's election.

Powell, a Democrat, was re-elected in Harlem for an 11th term.

Two warrants for his arrest have been issued for his refusal to pay $46,500 in a slander judgment.

'NO BITTERNESS'

Congratulations Wired by Barry

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater wired his congratulations to President Johnson today and offered his help "toward achieving a growing and better America and a secure and dignified peace."

"I say to the president as a fellow politician he did a wonderful job . . . he did a good job and I have congratulated him on it."

In a telegram which he read at his press headquarters here, Goldwater said, however, that the GOP "remains the party of opposition when opposition is called for.

"There is much to be done with Viet Nam, Cuba, the problem of law and order in this country, and a productive economy. Communism remains our number one obstacle to peace and I know that all Americans will join with you in honest solutions to these problems," Goldwater said.

Reading the telegram at his press headquarters Goldwater told newsmen he has "no bitterness or rancor," as a result of the election.

'DISAPPOINTED'

"I am surprised at the figures of this election, they did not reach the numbers that turned out in the 1960 election. I am disappointed that not more voters turned out," said Goldwater.

Asked about the defeat of candidates for Congress and governorships around the U.S., Goldwater said he has not had a chance to look at these totals. He said, however, that he be-

World Leaders Hail LBJ

By REUTERS

The world appeared in unusual agreement today that the American people had made the "right choice" in overwhelmingly returning Lyndon B. Johnson as president of the United States.

In general, many world leaders expressed relief that Republican candidate Barry Goldwater and his extreme right-wing followers didn't make it to the White House.

The only voice of dissent at the results came from Nationalist China where officials privately expressed disappointment at the Republican senator's defeat.

Many Nationalist Chinese favored Goldwater because they felt the Chiang Kai-shek regime might have had a freer hand to strike against Communist China.

Armed Forces Junta Rules In Bolivia

LA PAZ (AP)—President Victor Paz Estenssoro was overthrown in a military revolt in Bolivia today and fled the country.

Gen. Alfredo Obando Candia, armed forces commander, announced he had taken over the government as head of a military junta.

He pledged to retain power as briefly as possible and to call new elections.

He said Paz Estenssoro had brought trouble upon himself by fostering a constitutional amendment which permitted him to be elected to a second consecutive term last May.

Paz Estenssoro resigned to avoid bloodshed, Obando said.

JOHNSON'S VICTORY SPEECH

'Face the World As One'

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Lyndon B. Johnson planned a joyous Texas-style reunion with his election running-mate today, and asked all Americans to "bind up our wounds and to make this nation whole."

Vice-President-Elect Hubert Humphrey and Mrs. Humphrey were to fly down from Minneapolis, where they spent Tuesday night, for a huge mid-day barbecue at the LBJ ranch on the banks of the Pedernales River.

Other than that relaxing feast, the presidential plans were still unannounced.

Riding the wavecrest of votes that swamped Republican opponent Barry Goldwater, Johnson made an early morning appearance at the Municipal Auditorium in nearby Austin.

The main note he sounded, in a voice hoarse and soft, was that "there are many more things in America that unite us than divide us."

He asked Americans to "face the world as one" and called the election result "a mandate for unity, for a government that serves no special interest—no business government, no labor government."

Elected overwhelmingly and in his own right, Johnson pledged his administration "will be a government that provides equal opportunity for all and special privileges for none. It is a command to build on those principles and to move forward toward peace and a better life for all our people."

Magic Name of Kennedy Sweeps Bobby to Senate

NEW YORK (UPI)—The familiar and apparently magic name of Kennedy was back in the forefront of Democratic party politics today as Robert F. Kennedy celebrated a smashing victory in his first bid for elective office.

Although he was unable even to vote for himself, Kennedy convinced an overwhelming number of New York State voters that he was the right man for them —and not just a "carpetbagger" or political opportunist.

With nearly all of the state's record number of votes counted, the 38-year-old Kennedy appeared headed for a 600,000 vote plurality over his Republican opponent, Sen. Kenneth B. Keating. This would give him a greater victory in the state than that registered in 1960 by his brother, the late president John F. Kennedy, who won by 384,000.

Despite his victory, Kennedy ran far behind President Johnson's record-breaking pace in the empire state. Over a million voters in the state split their ballots to vote for Johnson and then crossed to the Republican column to vote for Sen. Keating.

The president rolled up an all-time-high plurality of nearly 2,400,000 votes in New York. He became the first presidential candidate in the state's modern history to capture every county, many of them rock-ribbed Republican strongholds.

But Kennedy still won in nearly every part of the state—in New York City, the suburbs and in upstate rural areas. He overcame a partial defection by voters in the Jewish sections of New York City, where Keating ran about 10 per cent better than he had six years ago.

Man Dies Before New Murder Trial

Brain Tumor Claims TB Victim Sentenced to Hang Year Ago

LADYSMITH — David Mitchell, granted a new trial after being sentenced to hang for the murder of his brother, died Tuesday in Vancouver General Hospital.

Mitchell, a resident of the Shell Beach Indian Reserve near here, had been admitted to hospital suffering from tuberculosis.

But Ronald Sampson, district Indian agent, was advised by the Indian affairs department in Vancouver Mitchell died of a brain tumor.

He had been charged with capital murder following the February, 1963, shooting of his brother on the reserve and sentenced to hang at the conclusion of the Nanaimo Fall Assizes in 1963.

The conviction was appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada, which ordered a new trial.

The new trial was scheduled to be heard at the 1964 Fall Assizes in Nanaimo but was postponed because of Mitchell's ill-health.

Magistrate, Accused Agree

DUNCAN—After turning his car over on the Trans-Canada Highway, Petty Officer Jeffrey Beaudry of Esquimalt, told police:

"This is what happens when you drink and drive."

In magistrate's court here Tuesday, Magistrate K. D. McAdam told Beaudry: "You should practice what you preach."

Beaudry was fined $150 and banned from driving for three months after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

The accident happened Monday afternoon.

HAND SIGNALS SIDE-TRACKED

LADYSMITH—A 140-year-old tradition died here this month.

Gone forever are the old hand, flag and lamp signals, mainstay of railroading language since the day the first engine chugged down the track.

Replacing them is the latest transistor, walkie-talkie radio.

The system has been introduced by Crown Zellerbach on their 22-mile, all-diesel logging railway.

It is one of the first rail systems—logging or commercial—to employ radio for engineer-brakeman communication.

★ ★ ★

In the past the brakeman has had to stand on top of the logs—sometimes 35 cars away from the engine—and signal with his arms to the driver.

Often it would take up to half a dozen tries before the driver finally stopped on the right spot.

At the same time, the brakeman was in a precarious position and it was not too uncommon for him to be toppled from his perch.

This sometimes resulted in serious injury or even death.

★ ★ ★

Now he can settle himself in a safe spot and tell the driver exactly how much further to back up. Fog, which in the past hampered operations, is no longer a worry.

Extension of radio to the railroad makes the company's logging business one of the most "in-touch" operations on the Island.

Everyone in the division is now in touch with someone else; the logging camp with the truck fleet; the tractor driver with his hauling supervisor and the logger on the hillside with the yarding machine by the roadside.

Colonel Named Magistrate At Salt Spring

FULFORD—Lt.-Col. Maurice Peiler, of Beddis Road, has been appointed magistrate and coroner for Salt Spring Island.

The retired officer will replace W. S. Anderson, of Ganges, as coroner and magistrate of the small debts and family and children's courts.

A CULTURED HOOTENANNY

DUNCAN—Is a Hootenanny culture?

Cowichan School Board members were not sure Monday night.

They referred the question to a committee before deciding to lower the rental charge to Duncan Kinsmen.

The club wants to sponsor a Folk Song Festival in the local high school Nov. 28.

CENTENNIAL IDEA STUDIED

Beaver Twin May Sail in '66

A replica of an historic ship may celebrate the centenary of the union of Vancouver Island and the rest of B.C. in 1966.

Deputy provincial secretary L. J. Wallace, head of B.C.'s committee planning celebrations for this and for Canada's centenary in 1967, said the idea is under consideration.

He said the ship would be a replica of the Beaver, a Hudson's Bay Co. vessel well-known in B.C. waters 100 years ago.

The Beaver was the first steamship to operate in the North Pacific.

It was chartered to the British admiralty for hydrographic surveys.

Mr. Wallace said the idea of a replica to sail round B.C. ports is one of dozens already received by centennial planners.

EGG MISSES, YOUTH FINED

DUNCAN—"Childish behavior such as this gives Halloween a bad name."

Magistrate D. K. McAdam said this Tuesday to a 16-year-old boy in juvenile court.

The boy admitted throwing an egg at a policeman Saturday night. He missed.

Charged under a city bylaw which bans the throwing of refuse, he was fined $20.

EGG BASH AVERTED

NANAIMO (CP)—Police said Monday they confiscated and eventually destroyed at least 29 dozen eggs Halloween night.

They said several carloads of youths had picked up the Grade "A" large eggs, apparently planning to throw them at pedestrians.

One car had 16 dozen, another had eight, a third four, and a fourth one. Others cars had handsfull

$3,190 Profit Marked Up By Exhibition

DUNCAN — Cowichan Exhibition made a profit this year of $3,190.

Exhibition directors Tuesday decided to spend $2,000 of the profit to pay for land bought three years ago at a cost of $6,000.

Despite the profit, the directors decided to increase admission fees next year from 75 cents to $1. Charge for children will still be 25 cents.

Higher labor cost was one reason given for the increase.

$5,325 IN PRIZES

The two-day fair paid out $5,325 in prize money, $3,317 going to entrants in the dairy and beef cattle, sheep and swine sections.

Over-all livestock entries at the exhibition were up on last year but beef cattle were down 13 per cent and swine entries dropped 45 per cent.

The question was posed—are Indian crafts dying out?

Figures show a 91 per cent drop in entries. Only four exhibitors entered, compared to 33 in 1963.

To offset this, entries in the junior section increased by 42 per cent with a 22 per cent rise of entrants.

Five Youths Face Charges in Morals Case

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Five youths from the Alberni were charged Tuesday with having sexual relations with a girl under 16, and additional charges of theft of property under $50 in value.

Charged were Thomas Livingstone, 20; Douglas Neuwirth, 20; Angus McGladrie, 18; Gerrit Seinen, 20, and Raymond Primeau, 19. Bail of $2,000 was set for Livingstone, Neuwirth, McGladrie and Seinen. Primeau did not appear in court.

Neuwirth was also charged with possession of stolen property.

Police said the charges were in connection with a Halloween incident involving a 15-year-old girl.
